Polo Grounds, New York, Oct. 8.—The 1937 World Series reached the shambles stage today with Giant hopes wrecked and broken beneath a third straight Yankee triumph. The score was 5 to 1.

"It can't happen here," die-hard Giant supporters had said as the series moved into the Polo Grounds after two defeats of the National Leaguers at Yankee Stadium. But it did. And it happened according to the same pattern of previous Yankee triumphs—a supine Giant team going down before the combined slugging and pitching skill of the American Leaguers.

In defeat today the Giants were pathetically helpless and inefficient. It was in utter confusion and with ranks demoralized that the Giants gave ground this afternoon.

The kind thing to say is that the Giants had the jitters. Actually they performed as if they knew they were over their heads. Outpitched, outbatted and outmaneuvered once more, the Giants in this third game added a slovenly defense to their woes. They made complete their own rout with four inexcusable fielding errors that in the latter innings caused even the Giant fans among the 37,385 in the stands to hoot mildly.

Monte Pearson Stars.

But, getting down to names and faces, it was blond, parrot-beaked Monte Pearson, No. 3 pitcher on the Yankee staff, who held the Giants in subjection until he left the premises with two out in the ninth and the bases full, at which point Johnny Murphy completed for Pearson, what was to be a five-hit game.

Pearson was something to watch in those early innings. Fourteen men he retired in order and only three balls did the Giants hit out of the infield. The more imaginative of the 37,385—a comparatively small World Series crowd that left gaping spaces in the outfield stands—began to conjure visions of a no-hit game for Pearson, until the first Giant hit occurred with two out in the fifth.

Manager Will Terry, of the Giants, had entrusted his pitching hopes today to his gamester, the right-handed Hal Schumacher, who had

RFC to Refuse Loans Unless Crisis Is Shown

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 8.—Reconstruction Finance Corporation officials will be ordered not to accept any more applications for loans "unless a real emergency can be shown," Jesse Jones, chairman of the Government agency, told the thirty-sixth annual convention of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks tonight.

"The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been making comparatively few loans for the past year and it is our purpose to discontinue general lending for the very good reason that there is ample private credit to meet legitimate demands," Jones said.

He said that the RFC expected the co-operation of banks in withdrawing from lending.

"With that co-operation we can quit, without it we can not," he said.

"The mama cow is still there but the calf is big enough to shift for itself," the RFC head said.

The agency wants to withdraw from the loan field as soon as possible without the loss "or inconvenience to those we have helped."

Jones said the country "seldom" has been more prosperous.

"In fact we have abundant crops and while prices are not as good as they should be, with some support through Government lending, too great sacrifice at harvest time can be avoided at least to some extent."

Discussing the falling stock market, Jones said that it was all due to fear and that business conditions have not warranted the decline.

He said there were "entirely" too

Bumper Crop Drives Cotton To 4-Yr. Low

Second Biggest Yield in History Forecast by U. S. Board.

By Robert C. Albright.

Further complicating the present economic outlook, the Federal Crop Reporting Board yesterday forecast the second largest cotton crop in history, forcing already dropping cotton prices to the lowest levels in four years.

Favorable weather raised Government estimates of the South's chief crop to 17,573,000 bales, more than 5,000,000 bales higher than last year, and 1,475,000 bales more than August estimates.

The surprise announcement caught markets off guard. In New Orleans cotton prices fell off $1.70 to $2.15 a bale and quotations on the staple in New York futures trading dropped to the lowest since 1933, slumping $1.40 to $1.90 a bale.

Roosevelt Consulted.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, chief advocate of a special session to cope with 1938 production-control plans, discussed the situation with President Roosevelt following a Cabinet meeting yesterday. Wallace said he "didn't think" the cotton forecast affected special session prospects. He declined to say whether the President had decided to call Congress back, but said he still favored the step.

Later, the Agriculture Department announced adoption by the New York Cotton Exchange of minimum margin requirements for cotton trading, as a speculative curb. Applicable to all except "hedging and straddle" trades, the new rule becomes effective next January 1. The exchange voluntarily adopted the margin requirements at the department's request. Similar action was expected of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange.

Wallace Not Alarmed.

Wallace had an opportunity to discuss the cotton situation and the broad farm picture with the President, after the subject of a special farm session had only casually cropped up at the cabinet meeting. Earlier the President indicated he may not decide on the proposed Congress call until he returns to Hyde Park next week.

Chatting briefly with reporters at the White House, Wallace voiced no alarm over the cotton developments. Despite recent Tokyo restrictions on cotton imports, he said America so far this year has shipped about as much cotton to the outside world as it did last year, when Japan was buying more than 1,000,000 bales of the American staple. Japanese imports of American cotton during the last seven-month period reached $54,826,000.

A radiogram to the department from American Consul Krentz at Kobe said Japanese importations of raw cotton during the fall months probably will be materially smaller because of general import restrictions. He said Japanese stocks were large, and sufficient to maintain mill activity for several months.

As a guard against already falling cotton prices, Congress before adjournment called for loans and subsidies to Southern farmers.

Davis Slated As Delegate Of America

By William V. Nessly.

Great Britain and the United States yesterday began discussion of the time and place for the conference at which signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty will draft plans for ending Japan's warfare in China.

Selection of Norman H. Davis, "roving ambassador," as this country's delegate to the conference appeared, meanwhile, to have become a stronger possibility, and The Hague was being discussed most prominently as the site for the meeting.

These were the highlights of a day of conferences and informal talks on the threatening foreign situation that followed President Roosevelt's return to the Capital yesterday morning from his Western trip.

Confers With Hull, Welles.

The developments included:

Shortly after his arrival here Mr. Roosevelt held a lengthy conference with Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Undersecretary Sumner Welles and Davis.

Later he was in consultation with the Cabinet on the Chicago speech in which he offered collaboration with other powers in moves to restore peace, and the State Department's subsequent denunciation of Japan as a violator of the Nine-Power and Kellogg-Briand Treaties.

V. A. L. Mallet, British charge d'affaires, discussed with Hugh Wilson, Assistant Secretary of State, preliminary arrangements for the meeting under the Nine-Power Pact.

White House Silent.

Neither the White House nor the State Department would reveal details of the day's discussions, but one member of the Cabinet who would not permit use of his name said there had been no change in the Government's policy and that no further steps, following the President's speech and the State Department's accusation of Japan, were being considered.

The attitude is held, it was understood, that America has spoken and it now remains for the other powers to propose some concrete program that can be considered. All thought of holding the conference of treaty signers here, as had been suggested in European countries, apparently had been halted by this country's stand against taking leadership in moves to "quarantine" aggressors in the current disturbances of world peace.

13 More Bombers Ordered for Army

Thirteen additional multi-engined bombing planes, costing approximately $2,518,000, have been ordered from the Boeing Aircraft Co., of Seattle, Wash., Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring announced yesterday.

The world's largest combat planes, these machines are intended for use by the General Headquarters Air Force of the Army. Each of the "flying fortresses" will be powered with four Wright cyclone engines, manufactured by the Wright Aeronautical Co., Paterson, N. J.

The bombers are constructed to fly at speeds in excess of 225 miles per hour. Carrying crews of seven to nine men, the planes are armored with five machine guns in addition to their load of bombs.

The new order, which also includes essential spare parts, will bring the number of flying fortresses in the Army Air Force to 26.

Autoist Hurls Bandit Suspect Off Running-Board in Wild Dash

A stranger, who leaped on the running board of the automobile of Morris A. Raines, 43, a Howard University botany instructor, was seriously injured last night when Raines, taking the man to be a bandit, drove a zig-zag course up Georgia avenue and shook him off.

Raines, who lives at 7204 Georgia avenue, was waiting for his wife, who was in a dry cleaning establishment in the 5400 block of Georgia avenue, when the stranger appeared and clambered onto the running board.

"Let me in," Raines said he shouted. "Let me in right away."

Raines, fearing a hold-up, locked the door, stepped on the accelerator and started weaving through traffic. He said he drove as close to other cars as possible, hoping to shake off the stranger on his running board.

In the 5600 block of Georgia avenue, Raines' automobile grazed another and his unwanted passenger was hurled off the running board, striking his head on the rear end of the other machine.

Police, cruising in a radio car, took the man to Gallinger Hospital, where he said he was Ralph Shepherd, 20, a painter, of the 4900 block of Fourth street northwest. He suffered a shoulder injury and a possible fracture of the skull.

Raines told police he had never seen the man before and was at a loss to explain his actions.

Drive Only to End Anti-Japanism, Leader Says After Stern Orders.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Oct. 9.—Gen. Iwane Matsui, Japanese commander in chief at Shanghai, told the Chinese public in a statement today "the sole aim of Japan's armed expedition in China is to eradicate at any cost China's anti-Japanese policy."

The commander's statement came on the heels of his proclamation yesterday of Japanese invasion. Chinese considered the proclamation, in which Matsui declared the Japanese army "is now prepared to use every means to subdue its opponents," as the equivalent of a diplomatically formal declaration of war.

The new statement said Japan bears no enmity toward the Chinese people, and declared Japan is "willing and happy to receive those Chinese who have a genuine desire for further peace in the Orient."

Orders From Tokyo.

Matsui said Japan is "determined to push discreetly but firmly toward the proclaimed end of forcing the bellicose (Chinese) government and its anti-Japanese army to alter its attitude."

In the opinion of Chinese and foreign observers here, Matsui's statements of yesterday and today probably were issued upon orders of Tokyo as an answer to United States and League of Nations decla-

Britain Pledges to Help U. S. End Wars in China and Spain

Roosevelt Believed Planning Mediation Without Use of Sanctions Against Japan; Chamberlain Warns Il Duce Not to Jeopardize Amity.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 8.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain tonight promised President Roosevelt Great Britain's whole-hearted co-operation to end "the sickening and horrifying spectacle" of two major wars.

[In British official circles it was understood President Roosevelt may propose a line of mediation regarding the Sino-Japanese war when adherents of the nine-power Washington Treaty are brought together in conference, the United Press reported. The plan of mediation, which would eliminate any immediate positive action against Japan such as international sanctions or embargoes, was said to have been discussed in diplomatic exchanges among Washington, Paris and London in the last 48 hours. —Editor's note.]

Premier Warns Duce.

At the same time the British Prime Minister cautioned Premier Mussolini of Italy that lasting Anglo-Italian friendship depends on Italy's decision on withdrawal of Italian volunteers from the Spanish civil war.

While Chamberlain was speaking at a Conservative Party mass meeting at Scarborough, there were reports from Rome that Italy was reinforcing her garrisons in Libya and from Gibraltar that 4,000 to 5,000 troops of undetermined nationality

Text of Japan's Treaty Statement

By the Associated Press.

"The League of Nations regards Japan's action in China as violation of the Nine-Power Treaty and the Antiwar Pact. The United States published a statement to the same effect.

"This was due to misunderstanding Japan's true intentions. The Japanese government extremely regrets this misunderstanding.

"The present conflict was caused by Chinese troops' irregular attacks on Japanese troops which were stationed in North China according to treaty stipulations. Japanese were maneuvering at Lukouchiao with a small number of troops, as Japanese garrisons were widely scattered during peace time.

"After the outbreak of the trouble, Japan tried to settle locally and the action of the Japanese troops was nothing more than a measure of self-defense. Japan had no other intention whatever.

"Aggravation of the conflict in Shanghai and North China was due to the attitude of the Chinese, who, violating the Shanghai truce agreement signed in 1932, stationed 40,000 troops in the demilitarized zone and were planning to murder 30,000 Japanese residents, including women and children.

"At that time the Japanese forces were only 3,000 strong. Thus, China is responsible for the aggravation of the situation because she disregarded Japan's nonaggression policy and mobilized a huge number of troops against Japan."

"This forced Japan to take military action. Japan's military operations in China today have been entirely caused by China's provocative attitude. Japan's action is entirely in self-defense.

"What Japan wants in taking the present action is to eradicate China's anti-Japanese policy and maintain peace in the Far East cooperating with China."

"Japan has no territorial ambitions.

"Accordingly, Japan's action in China violates no existing treaties in any way whatever. On the contrary, China in carrying out her stubborn anti-Japanese policy, incited by Red influence, is planning to drive out Japanese rights and interests from China by force of arms.

"It is China's government that is violating the spirit of the pact against war, menacing the peace of the world."

Mother With Broken Neck Bears Healthy Child, Her 19th

A 39-year-old mother, whose neck was broken in an automobile accident and who bore her 19th child after the crash, was recovering in Alexandria General Hospital last night, and surgeons marveled at the happy combination of circumstances that brought a successful outcome to so unusual a case.

Touching the healthy eight pound 10 ounce infant at her side, Mrs. Myrtle Arrington wife of a Woodbridge railroad worker, smiled as physicians told her she probably would become well.

As for the baby—christened Nadine Genevieve yesterday—the doctors said she was perfect.

Mrs. Arrington has borne 19 children and 14 of them live. She has been married 21 years.

She was injured last Sunday and Nadine Genevieve was born Thursday, four days after her mother suffered a fracture that usually proves fatal.

Mrs. Arrington's injuries were treated by her physician, Dr. C. L. Fifer, while obstetrical attention was given by Dr. J. A. Sims. Delivery of the baby required six hours, hospital attaches said, and the birth was accompanied with little difficulty.

Because of the unusual character of the case, Dr. Fifer already has been requested to record it in detail for the Journal of Medical Science, it was understood.

Unimpressed by her injuries but thrilled at her new child, Mrs. Arrington smiled, glad that the question of a name for the youngster had been settled.

"I've had so many children," said she, "that I'd almost run out of names."

Nippon Silent On 9-Power Stand, Regrets Pact Charges

Foreign Office Issues Statement; Cabinet Withholds Word.

Other Powers Seen As Misinformed

Tried, Failed to Settle First Clash, Says Declaration.

By the United Press.

Tokyo (Saturday), Oct. 9. Japan officially spurned any effort of the United States or the League of Nations to intervene in the Chinese war, in a foreign office statement replying to the condemnation of Japan under the Nine-Power Treaty.

The foreign office, offering the Japanese reply in lieu of an expected government answer through the cabinet, expressed its "regret" the United States and the League had branded Japan as a "treaty violator," but reiterated Japan's determination to pursue its present policy in China.

The reply failed to mention what Japan's attitude would be on the proposal to convoke signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty, as recommended by the League of Nations and approved by the American Government.

Cabinet Passes Buck.

The cabinet at the last minute decided to permit the foreign office to issue the Japanese reply, instead of making a formal declaration which it was believed would lend weight to the situation.

The matter, however, was discussed in Friday's cabinet meeting, according to reliable information, and the statement was authoritatively regarded as the government's real attitude.

It was explained the statement was removed from the sphere of an official cabinet declaration, due to the surprise of the United States' action.

Opinion was expressed in official circles that any convocation of the Nine-Power Treaty signatories would have no lasting effect, and it was desired not to aggravate the situation by a cabinet reply.

The official foreign office statement reviewed the Lukouchiao incident of July 7, which provoked hostilities in North China, and said Japan tried to settle the controversy locally.

A. F. L. Record Spotless, Says NRA Official

Labor Must Accept Responsibilities or Lose Privileges, He Warns

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Oct. 8.—A former NRA official told the American Federation of Labor convention today that labor must accept its responsibilities or face loss of its privileges.

Sol Rosenblatt, of New York, arbiter of labor disputes in the garment industry and former NRA administrator of the movie code, complimented the A. F. of L., however, for what he said was its "unsullied" record for keeping its contracts.

"The recognition of labor's rights under the laws of the land must not be disturbed, and so long as agreements are kept and performed, they will not be disturbed," he said.

"But the old distinction between use and abuse still holds. The same congress and the same State legislators which have enacted measures to protect collective bargaining may . . . withdraw those statutes and laws because experience may have demonstrated that labor was unwilling to recognize its responsibility under those laws."

W. R. Trotter, delegate from the Printers' union, accused the convention credentials committee today of giving his union "the run-around" by delaying the seating of Charles P. Howard, C. I. O. secretary, as a delegate.

Trotter's remarks followed the committee's announcement that it would hold a hearing in the Howard case Monday, the day the C. I. O. meeting in Atlantic City, N. J., is slated to start.

mended its executive council for its battle against the C. I. O. during the past year.

I. M. Ornburn, secretary of the federation's union label department, told the convention the women of this country could play "a dramatic part" in stopping the Sino-Japanese conflict by boycotting Japanese goods.

"Our Nation is the greatest purchaser of Oriental products and, consequently, so long as we buy these goods, we are financing their war," he added.

Senator Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, told the convention he proposed "in due time" to present to A. F. of L. officials for their opinion the draft of legislation to stop wage slashing due to unfair business practices.

Berry has been talking about such legislation since the Supreme Court outlawed NRA codes in May, 1935, and for two years headed the Committee for Industrial Co-operation—an organization that drafted an NRA substitute bill that never was introduced.

Nevertheless, Berry said, he was "pretty well fed up on bureaus in Washington to regulate wages, hours and business."

The new law he has in mind, he said, would protect collective bargaining without expense to the Government aside from the cost of prosecuting violators. Berry also pledged his union, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union of North America, to continued support of the federation. Berry sided with John L. Lewis in most of the skirmishes preliminary to formation of the C. I. O.

Officials of the Committee for Industrial Organization said yesterday they expect Charles P. Howard, C. I. O. secretary, to attend the first meeting of the organization's executive council meeting in Atlantic City Monday.

Loudoun to Open 4 Slaying Trials

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 8.—Four murder cases are on the docket for the October term of Loudoun County Circuit Court, which will open here Monday morning. Judge J. R. H. Alexander will preside at the sessions.

The cases include the Commonwealth against John Winzor, Lester Edds and Charles Osburn, charged with first degree murder in connection with the slaying of Henry W. Saffell, aged Unison merchant, on August 31, 1937. Winzor's case will be heard on October 14. He will be defended by Francis Patton.

Lester Edds will be heard on October 18, and he will be defended by Leo A. Rover, former assistant district attorney. The case of Charles Osburn is set for October 21. He will be defended by A. F. Anderson.

The case of the Commonwealth against William B. Parkey, charged with the first degree murder of Elmer Warren, will be heard October 25. He will be defended by Lucas Phillips.

Two felony cases will be presented to the regular grand jury on the opening day.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

BACK at the old desk in Washington after a transcontinental swing with President Roosevelt. Glad I went, but mighty glad to be back. In one of his rear platform "national viewpoint" speeches, the President called Washington "a narrow place." Maybe it is, but, at least, you can find out what is going on in the world here, which is impossible after you cross the Mississippi River.

Undoubtedly, there are a number of persons living in New York and exercising a great influence in national affairs who act as though the Hudson River were the western boundary of the United States. A larger number of Easterners, perhaps, think a good purpose would be served if the country west of the Mississippi were given back to the Indians.

But, man for man and woman for woman, I daresay, the provincial mind is more prevalent in the West than in the East. Easterners on the whole are interested in national questions and problems, but your average Westerner seems intent only on those problems at his doorstep—building dams, constructing irrigation projects and—in the silver-producing States—"doing something for silver." Mr. Roosevelt's advice to strive for a "national viewpoint" is needed in the West just as much as it is in the East.

Some reminiscences and unused notes of the trip:

The West appears to be growing more conservative than it was two or three years ago. Perhaps because it is better fed. Notices of forthcoming Townsend Club meetings now take up less than one-third of a column daily in the Portland and Seattle newspapers, whereas two or three years ago such notices required a column or more of type.

Oregon's former army officer, 74-year-old pugnacious Governor, Gen. Charles H. Martin, is being credited with powers of divination. In introducing President Roosevelt at the Bonneville Dam he asserted that "the President, like the Greeks of old, has come with us to rejoice over this great dam."

Did he have in mind the old adage "Beware of the Greeks, bearing gifts?" Gov. Martin favors a policy which would keep the Bonneville power for sale at low rates to industries along the Columbia River and around Portland. President Roosevelt in his Bonneville speech rejected that policy and declared for the widest diffusion of the Bonneville electricity among the homes and farms of the Northwest as "postage stamp" rates.

They call them "postage stamp rates" because the per kilowatt charge is the same if the consumer lives 10 miles or 100 miles from the dam switchboard.

So many Portlanders wanted to be on the reception committee to great President Roosevelt that badges were issued to more than 700 persons. But only half a dozen, including Senate Republican Leader Charles H. McNary, got aboard the Presidential private car to shake the Roosevelt hand.

Nobody, however, wanted to be on the finance committee to dig up the money to pay for the President's reception. In the end, so we heard, the private utilities and the Portland banks—just "economic royalists"—put up the cash. We went through Portland so fast we could not confirm that report.

"It will take a lot of curling irons to use up the power of Bonneville," mused Donald J. Sterling, managing editor of the Portland Journal, as he listened to Mr. Roosevelt's speech declaring the power would be distributed to ease the burden of the housewife.

Remember when Americans used to go to Canada to get a drink? Now the Canadians come to the United States. The good citizens of Winnipeg drive 130 miles to Grand Forks, N. Dak., because, under that State's new liquor law, women may stand up at the bar.

Rufus Wood, editor of the Wenatchee (Wash.) World, who, in 1918, wrote the first news story ever published regarding the construction of the Grand Coulee Dam and irrigation project, is being urged to be the Republican candidate for the Senate against Democratic incumbent Homer T. Bone, up for re-election next year. They will have no dispute over the Roosevelt public power and dam policies.

Senator Bone, however, is on a hot labor spot. He has been put in the middle of the fight between the A. F. L. and the C. I. O. Dave Beck, the A. F. of L. chieftain, who runs Seattle without visible difficulty, has warned Senator Bone to watch his step—an intimation he had better declare for the A. F. L. But the radical and influential Commonwealth Federation, founded by Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach, is hot for the C. I. O. Washington State farmers do not like Dave Beck and his A. F. L.

Whenever President Roosevelt visits a city or town where a large number of children are in evidence, he refers to it as "a typical Roosevelt town—large families." Someone called his attention to the number of children who lined the streets of Boise, Idaho (there seemed to be tens of thousands of children in that town). Mr. Roosevelt's response in an aside, heard over the loudspeaker in the dining car connected to the rear platform, was:

"Yes, I love children. You know 2,000,000 of them become voters every year."

When the President at Fort Peck Dam, Mont., ridiculed pleas for balancing the budget by referring to a New York publisher with an annual income of $400,000, everyone in his entourage thought he was talking about Roy Howard, dominant figure in the Scripps-Howard chain. But Mr. Howard, responding to a Baltimore Sun inquiry, replied: "Thanks for the compliment, but the shoe does not fit me." Seven other New York publishers also declined the honor.

Highlights of trip:

Most interesting person met: Dave Beck, chief organizer for the A. F. of L. Teamsters Union in the 11 Western States.

Most amusing episode: Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney's flying leap into President Roosevelt's arms and the latter's hesitancy in turning his back.

Japan Boycott May Start War, Wheeler Says

Montana Senator, However, Says Only Sanctions Will Tame Tokyo.

By the Associated Press.

Wichita, Kans., Oct. 8.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, in an interview today said an economic boycott is "the only way Japan can be brought to her senses," but warned such action "might lead us into another world war."

"Whether the American people are willing to make business sacrifices also is another question," he said, adding that American participation in economic measures against Japan would bring retaliatory action by Tokyo and "would mean that business recovery in the United States would be delayed." He added:

"I, for one, would never go so far as to vote to put this country into war unless we were attacked."

Nye Asks Strict Law.

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—United States Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, chairman of the Senate Munitions Committee, said today that "in the light of President Roosevelt's Chicago speech," he would move in the next session for further limitation of Presidential discretion in applying neutrality legislation.

Nye emphasized he had no wish to embarrass the President in his present course in the Far East and far less wish to give aid or comfort to Japan. "Japan is the aggressor nation and it would be a good thing if she were stopped," he said.

"I will not be alone in this matter. I believe that the movement for a stricter neutrality policy has been given impetus by all that has recently happened."

Asked Use of Act.

The Senator pointed out that he had gone on the radio the night before Congress adjourned to ask that the neutrality act, which calls for an embargo on participant nations when a state of war exists, be applied in the Far East.

"That act as it reads is clear enough," he said. "It directs the President to apply it 'when a state of war exists.' It does not say 'when war is declared.' I voted against the act because it left the President too much discretion. And now he has enlarged upon that discretion."

Roosevelt Delays Action on Policies, Will Seek Advice

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt told a largely attended press conference yesterday he would make no important decisions on future policies until he has had a chance to talk with his leaders and advisers.

He will return to Hyde Park next Wednesday morning to speak at the 250th anniversary of the establishment of the Town of Poughkeepsie and the 150th anniversary of the Constitutional Convention, he said.

The President smiled as he remarked the keynote of that speech would be another reference to his great-great-grandfather Isaac, who was a delegate to the convention.

In response to other questions, he said he expected to name soon an administrator for the new low cost housing division of the Interior Department.

The President, dressed in a gray business suit, appeared at ease and rested despite his long and arduous two weeks' cross-country tour, from which he returned yesterday.

Walker Given Job Improperly, N. Y. High Court Rules

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Former Mayor James J. Walker's position as assistant counsel to the New York City Transit Commission again was in jeopardy today through a ruling by Supreme Court Justice Samuel I. Rosenbaum.

Justice Rosenbaum held the approval of the State civil service commission and the public service commission should have been obtained before the transit commission appointed Walker.

"The court assumes that if the conclusion here reached is sustained in the appellate courts, the employment will be terminated," the ruling said.

Women Urge Rules In Rayon Industry

The General Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday approved efforts of the Federal Trade Commission to set up trade practice rules for the rayon industry.

In a letter to the commission, Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the federation, declared her organization felt the proposed rules were "eminently satisfactory from the standpoint of the consumer and that their final adoption without change would be a great step forward."

In another letter, Katherine E. Noe, president of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, said that "by establishing 'rayon' as the generic name for the chemical fiber produced artificially from cellulose, no matter by what process it is produced, the Federal Trade Commission will go very far toward preventing misrepresentation."

Greyhound Buses to Run Despite Strike, Says Aide

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Greyhound buses will continue to operate despite a strike called for 5 a. m. Sunday by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, H. J. Wilkins, operating superintendent of the line in New York, predicted today.

Wilkins said he did not believe a majority of the men will strike. About 1,200 bus drivers have been ordered out by the brotherhood in an area that includes St. Louis, Washington, Detroit, Chicago, Buffalo, Norfolk, Va., Louisville, Cincinnati and the New England States.

Drive Planned On Unlicensed Autoists Here

Van Duzer Asserts 10,000 Motorists in Capital Lack Permits.

A round-up of hundreds of persons believed to be operating automobiles in the District without drivers' permits will be put under way by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, it was learned yesterday.

Just how many persons there are operating cars illegally, the traffic division does not know, since their apprehension heretofore has been left to chance. In such fashion, however, some 2,000 unlicensed drivers were discovered last year. Had they not been involved in accidents or halted for traffic violations, they doubtless would have escaped detection.

"On a proportionate basis," Van Duzer said, "there must be 10,000 or 12,000 persons here driving without permits. All we can do, though, is guess. If they get in no trouble, there is no discovery."

But the very fact that so many are caught through accidents, Van Duzer pointed out, is evidence that the driver without a permit is a dangerous driver.

What is to be done to round up such drivers, Van Duzer said, will be determined at a conference he is soon to have with Commissioner Melvin Hazen. In preparation, Van Duzer is now compiling data on the number of persons involved in accidents who have had no permits.

In some cities, the police make a periodic check to weed out motorists without permits. They stop, for instance, 10 out of every 50 cars and ask the drivers to show their permits.

That method may be adopted here, but Van Duzer was not prepared yesterday to say whether it would be recommended to Hazen. In other cities, this periodic checking has been effective not only in the number of motorists arrested, but in the number frightened into staying away from steering wheels.

The same system is used in England, and is reported to have proved unusually effective.

Kiwanis Club Gets Anson Mills Fund For Child Welfare

Halting the gayety of the annual ladies night of the Washington Kiwanis Club, President George Mangan made the announcement this week that beginning this year the scope of the club's work in the interest of underprivileged children will be doubled.

Gathered in the main ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel amid a Spanish fiesta background, the Kiwanians were informed that four members of the club perpetually are to administer a $125,000 trust fund, a surplus accumulated through capable investment of the estate of the late Gen. Anson Mills.

Interest from this fund, together with the annual appropriations that have been made by the Kiwanis Club for the past 14 years will make it possible to handle twice as many cases as before.

It was the wish of the late Gen. Mills that any surplus from his designated charities be devoted to welfare work for children, leaving judgment in the matter to Bruce Baird, trustee, and a member of the Kiwanis Club. Believing that the program to aid crippled children as carried on by the Kiwanians most closely followed the desires of the late general, Mr. Baird has formed a corporation accordingly. "The Anson Mills Foundation" is the name of the corporation formed last month. Of the seven directors, the four Kiwanians, besides Mr. Baird, are Bynum E. Hinton, Edwin H. Etz and George P. Mangan.

World Gold Production.

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—August world gold production totaled 3,242,000 fine ounces, against 3,157,000 in July and 2,403,000, excluding Russia, in August, 1936, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reported today. Total output, excluding Russia, for the first eight 1937 months was 19,628,000 ounces, against 18,209,000 in the like period last year.

Leaders Study Episcopal Unity Under 1 Head

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Oct. 8.—A plea to create a supreme head—spiritual and temporal—of the Protestant Episcopal Church went today to its house of bishops, house of deputies and woman's auxiliary.

The Right Rev. Philip Cook, of Delaware, president of the national council, asserted at a joint session of the triennial convention that "there must be a leader."

"Not a dictator or a hierarchy," he said, "but a father in God to whom all the church can look."

Bishop Cook asserted "the church should have the courage to shake off its timidity about putting its unity under one head." He added the question of title could be determined later.

At the same time he presented a recommendation of the national council, which is the church's board of directors, that the presiding bishop, now the church's spiritual leader, be given the topmost administrative authority as president of the national council.

The council also proposed that the presiding bishop, upon assuming the council presidency, surrender his diocesan jurisdiction. The present presiding bishop, the Right Rev. James De Wolf Perry, heads the diocese of Rhode Island.

"To prevent the possibility of the presiding bishop being cumbered with many details as administrative head and that he may be released for visitations over the church and full exercise of spiritual leadership," Bishop Cook said the council would recommend he be given two vice presidents.

Greater support of the church headquarters was urged by Bishop Cook as the council presented a budget of $7,500,000 for 1938-39-40, which compares with expenditures of $7,194,746 in the previous triennium.

Indianapolis Halts Delivery of Milk

Indianapolis, Oct. 8 (AP).—Indianapolis residents were rushing the growler today, but it was for milk—not beer. A strike of truck drivers at three dairies caused a complete suspension of milk deliveries. The Indianapolis milk council, which ordered the suspension of deliveries because it said it "feared violence and new strikes," announced that a full supply of milk was available at dairies.

C. Winfield Hunt, secretary of the milk council, said the dairy operators had no intention of dealing with the Milk and Ice Cream Drivers Union, which called the strike. The State labor division met with both sides in an effort to settle the dispute.

Ouster Broke Law, Says Radio Writer

Cincinnati, Oct. 8 (AP).—The American Federation of Radio Artists filed a complaint today with the National Labor Relations Board, charging the Columbia Broadcasting System and Station WKRC, Cincinnati, with violation of the Wagner act in the discharge of William Seymour, a news writer, because of alleged union activity.

Philip G. Phillips, regional director for the NLRB, said that, to his knowledge, it was the first case of its kind to be filed against a radio chain.

U. S. and Hazen Collide Over Building Space

District Attorney Wants Justice Department to Control New Structure.

A quarrel over the division of space in the new $1,500,000 Police Court Building broke out yesterday between United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

"Why doesn't the Attorney General provide space for the United States attorney in the Department of Justice Building?" Hazen asked.

Garnett said he would confer with Attorney General Cummings next week and suggest that legislation be submitted to Congress to transfer control of the new Police Court Building to the Justice Department.

"I never heard of a such a thing," said Hazen. "District taxpayers paid for the Police Court Building, not the Federal Government. It would be ridiculous for us to surrender it to the Justice Department."

Hazen pointed out that the Municipal Court, welfare agencies and weights, measures and markets office are in "deplorable" quarters, and should be given preference over a Federal agency in assigning space in the new court building.

Garnett had proposed that the grand jury be given rooms in the structure, but the Commissioners rejected the proposal in a letter. He asked for the use of two unfinished courtrooms on the third floor.

The Commissioners previously had named a space committee to decide what municipal agencies shall be assigned to the unused rooms in the building.

Early Approval To Be Asked in Sale of Fidelity

Court Sanction of Assets' Purchase Will Be Sought Next Week.

Court approval for the proposed contract for sale of the assets of the Fidelity Building & Loan Association to the new First Federal Savings & Loan Association will be sought early next week, it was indicated yesterday by officials.

The plans will be submitted to the court at that time.

There are still several details in the contract which are being considered by legal experts of the Comptroller's Office and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

It was thought that another meeting of the bank board would be necessary before approval of the revised plan would be issued, although the board has approved everything "in principle."

Officials believed that with no restrictions on withdrawals from the new bank, many of the shareholders may wish to buy some shares in the First Federal upon its reopening. This action, they believe, will bring the proportion of consents to the plan to more than 75 per cent.

Assurance is given to the shareholders that 85 cents will be available to each invested dollar, either in cash or in shares in the First Federal.

7,500 Miners Quit in Support Of 39 in Shaft

Plea of Wives Is Ignored; Conference Promised on Wage Scale.

By the Associated Press.

Lansford, Pa., Oct. 8.—Thirty-nine hard-coal miners ignored the pleas of their wives that they give up their sit-down vigil deep in a Panther Creek Valley mine and 7,500 fellow workers lay down their tools in sympathy today.

The complete shutdown of the Lehigh Navigation Coal Co.'s working here in the heart of the world's largest anthracite producing area brought the union and the operators toward a truce conference.

Hugh V. Brown, district president of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers, came from nearby Hazleton to meet with J. B. Warriner, Lehigh president, in an effort to iron out the dispute over wages that started early in the week.

After a brief conference Brown sent down to the miners a request that they return to their homes. He promised he would call them to a meeting not later than next Wednesday, when they could sit around a conference table with Warriner, Thomas Kennedy, international secretary-treasurer of the U. M. W. A., and himself.

Brown sent a copy of his request to a mass meeting of the 7,500 idle workers.

After two days and two nights, huddled a quarter of a mile below the surface of the earth, the little band of strikers sent out messages today that they would stay there until they had a signed contract from union officials specifying what a fair day's pay shall be for coal cutting. The union, Brown said, had nothing to do with the strike.

Early in the day, wives of the strikers sent down food and with Peter Flyzik, a union official, a message urging the men to come out and then settle the argument. The men shot back, No!" But they advised against a general strike.

The thousands of others voted to stay at work. Then the women urged them "to do something about it." Another vote was taken and this time the men decided to lay down their tools.

Says 'I'll Blow Your Brains Out,' Woman Clerk Bluffs Bandit

MRS. GRACE SMITH.

Quick thinking by a woman clerk of a cleaning and dyeing store yesterday repulsed a colored man apparently bent on a holdup and possible attack.

Mrs. Grace Smith, the clerk of the store, 1538 North Capitol street, was behind the counter of the establishment when the man entered.

"He asked if I had change for a quarter," Mrs. Smith said, "and when I said 'no,' he left."

He returned to the store within 10 minutes, Mrs. Smith said, but before he spoke he locked the door from the inside.

"I'd been sitting in a chair behind the counter and when he latched the door, I got up and took hold of the chair, just in case," she said.

"He asked me what the price was for cleaning a pair of trousers."

As he moved nearer the counter the man reached into his pocket as if to get a gun, Mrs. Smith said.

"I reached down under the counter, where my pocketbook lay, and yelled, 'Get out of here or I'll blow your brains out.'"

It was only a bluff, Mrs. Smith said. The man fled.

Police said the colored man answered the description of one who is suspected of recent holdups and attempted attacks.

Police Thwart 50 Pickets at ToykoEmbassy

Meeting HeldAcross Street, War Protest Given Vice Consul.

Thirty policemen in front of the Japanese Embassy thwarted a scheduled demonstration yesterday against the invasion of China by Japan.

Bearing placards that denounced the "murder of the Chinese people," about 50 picketers attempted to cross the street, but desisted when warned by police, in charge of Inspector Edward Kelly.

There was no violence and the demonstrators were orderly. A patrol was parked nearby in case of emergency.

At the request of the demonstrators, permission was given a committee of three to call at the Chancery and present a statement of protest to the Ambassador. The committee was received at the door by Kyan Yarnieto, vice consul, who promised to present the statement to the envoy. A brief meeting was then held across the street and the statement was read to the gathering. "Invasion" of their constitutional rights by police was condemned by Jack Zukor, national representative of the United Retail Employes, who promised "co-operation with police now" but warned of "action" in the future.

The statement, which was signed by the American League Against War and Fascism, said it "deplores the action of any government in breaking treaties solemnly entered into, and more particularly the violation by Japan of the Nine-Power Treaty and the Kellogg Peace Pact."

"We pledge ourselves to boycott all Japanese gooods and to induce others to do likewise until such time as the conduct of the Japanese Government entitles it to be considered within the realm of civilization," the statement said.

12 Survivors of Annapolis '81 Display Spirit in Class Reunion

Erect and Ruddy Despite Their Average Age of Nearly 80 Years, Veterans Recall 3 Japanese Admirals Were Their Classmates.

Although they admit they lack the numbers of an American Legion convention, a dozen gentlemen of the old school, Annapolis in this case, deny that any reunion could show more spirit per capita than their own informal gathering at the Lafayette Hotel this week.

The 12 men, with their erect carriage and ruddy complexions, are half of the present survivors from the class of midshipmen who entered the United States Naval Academy 60 years ago this fall.

"The famous class of 1881," they concede, was considered by some Academy officers "a pretty wooden lot" during collegiate days, but the last half century has found its members distinguishing themselves on the bridge of warships in Asiatic and Atlantic waters, on the battlefields of France and Cuba and in all walks of American industrial and political life.

Many of the most renowned men of '81 lie buried in a special plot in Arlington Cemtery, including John Weeks, Secretary of War under Harding and Coolidge, and Gen. George Barnett, commander of the Marine Corps in the World War.

William L. Emmet, who came from Schenectady for the reunion, 20 years ago designed marine engines with a capacity of 200,000 horsepower for the aircraft carriers Lexington and Saratoga at a time when the most powerful battleships developed no more than 35,000 horsepower. He confided to classmates yesterday that of the modern liners, the Normandie most nearly conforms to his own principles of engine construction and is "a far better ship than the Queen Mary."

O. E. Weller, former Senator from Maryland; I. B. Parsons, a bank president in Hillsboro, Calif., and Capt. W. H. Stayton, of Washington, president of the Naval Academy graduates' association, are all at the reunion, too, exchanging salty reminiscences of the years that lie between 1877 and 1937.

They recall often the three Japanese midshipmen of the class of 1881, invited to Annapolis by a courtesy arrangement prevailing between the American and Japanese government in the 1870's. There was Admiral Urin, second in command to Admiral Togo during the Russo-Japanese War, and Admiral Serata, who became chief of staff of the Japanese navy within 12 years of graduation and lost his life in the Battle of Yellow River in the war with China in 1894. The other is Admiral Enouye, of royal blood, still living and exercising his prerogatives as an "elder statesman."

They argue as to the possible influence of Annapolis training on Japanese naval tactics and they remind each other of the class reunion in 1922, held in Tokyo, when "for two months you couldn't pay for a drink." But in the mellow atmosphere of their first reunion since 1931, the class of 1881 does not discuss the present Far Eastern crisis.

The class, according to Capt. Stayton, "is a little too old" for any formal round of banquets and sightseeing, and when yesterday's luncheon was over some drifted along to the Army and Navy Club, while others lingered around a piano to essay "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean."

Today the class will watch the Navy eleven play Virginia, renewing old memories at Annapolis. They will find, if Capt. Stayton's recent observations are any guide, that the middies of today are more serious and industrious than they were 60 years ago. "The country is safer," the captain added, "but the boys don't have as much fun as we did."

White House Issue In Arkansas Race

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 8 (AP).—Arkansas' All-Democratic senatorial campaign took on more of a national complexion today with a charge by Gov. Carl E. Bailey that his opponent, Congressman John E. Miller, sought White House approval of his candidacy.

Bailey told a Pine Bluff audience last night Miller "stayed in Washington after Congress adjourned so he could go down to the White House and get the President's indorsement of his candidacy."

"But he didn't get it," the Governor asserted. "He is not in sympathy with the President's program. . . . Send me to the Senate and I'll support the President in every respect."

Howe Leaves $1 To His Daughter; She Wrote Novel

Atchison, Kans., Oct. 8 (AP).—The will of E. W. Howe, opened today, divides the residue of his estate of approximately $200,000 between his sons, James P. Howe and Eugene Howe. The publisher-philosopher's daughter, Mateel Howe Farnham, of Westport, Conn., was bequeathed $1.

Friends of the family explained that Howe resented portions of the novel, "Rebellion," written by Mrs. Farnham ten years ago. His sons said today they will share their inheritance equally with their sister.

Adelaide Howe, a niece, was bequeathed $50,000, and Nellie Webb, society editor of the Atchison Globe for 37 years, was bequeathed $1,500. Howe died Sunday.

Salesman Admits Arson for Funds To Aid Sick Wife

Robert Alvin Lynch, 35, Washington automobile salesman, yesterday pleaded guilty to arson charges a few minutes after indictment by a special grand jury summoned by Judge Walter T. McCarthy of the Fairfax County Circuit Court. Lynch was arrested Tuesday night.

Judge McCarthy withheld sentence until October 21, pending further investigation of Lynch's record.

Charged with setting fire to his house in Weyanoke, Va., on September 20, Lynch said that his wife required medical attention and that he had been threatened with eviction from his house, which he had built largely on credit. The house and its contents were insured for $2,000.

Evidence for the Commonwealth was submitted by E. T. Kirby, sheriff of Fairfax County, and two Virginia fire marshals, Sam Steiner and L. R. Travers, of Richmond.

D. C. Police Watch For Missing Girls

Metropolitan Police yesterday were asked to search for two young girls, Marjorie C. Dickerson and Florence V. Satterwhite, both of Richmond, Va., reported missing after a trip from the Virginia capital to Baltimore.

An aunt of the 14-year-old Dickerson girl, Mrs. Paul T. Driscoll, 829 Sixth street northeast, said the two girls had disappeared from Richmond several days ago, police reported. Later the two appeared in Baltimore at the home of a sister of the 13-year-old Satterwhite girl.

Hardly had Virginia police been notified that the two girls had been found when they disappeared again. Police, who say they rode from Richmond to Baltimore with the driver of a chicken truck, believe the pair may make Washington their next stop.

Kosher Butchers Force an Inquiry

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Commissioner of Markets William Fellowes Morgan, jr., sought at a conference today to iron out some of the issues raised by the strike of kosher butchers which is scheduled to end tomorrow night.

At the close of the conference Morgan said immediate steps would be taken to enact an ordinance, patterned after one now in effect in Seattle, to require licensing of butchers and packers and compulsory grading of meats.

He also said the department of markets would begin Monday an investigation of charges that packing houses are substituting inferior grades.

Una Merkel Saves Man From Water

Lake Arrowhead, Calif., Oct. 8. (AP).—Una Merkel, film actress, rescued Arthur Camp from Lake Arrowhead today after the backwash from her motorboat upset his skiff. The actress caught Camp's suspenders with a boat hook and held him until help arrived from shore. Camp, a movie property man, was unable to swim.

Maritime Unions Win Strike on Morgan Line

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—A strike by four maritime unions against three Morgan Line ships today resulted in the signing of an agreement before the day's end, the National Maritime Union announced.

The agreement, signed with the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, provides a wage increase, closed shop and two weeks' vacation with pay, the union said.

DavidsonDeath Solution Due at 'Any Moment'

Soldier 1 of Trio Expected to Be Seized; New Search for Gun Futile.

Solution to the strange and brutal murder of Elmer J. Davidson, U. S. Chamber of Commerce research expert, may "break at any moment," Virginia State Police Sergt. E. J. McDermott said last night.

While Sergt. McDermott again visited Washington yesterday to trace "several confusing angles" of the case, his partner in the investigation, State Policeman Maury G. Sneed, indicated at Stafford, Va.—a few miles from the murder scene—at least three arrests are expected.

A new search for the killer's gun was conducted late yesterday along lonely Widewater road, where Davidson's body was found beneath a tree almost a week ago. The hunt, however, was fruitless. Sneed is convinced the weapon was thrown away after Davidson was murdered.

A former service man—marine or soldier—will be one of the first to be taken into custody when and if an arrest is made, it was predicted last night.

$20,000 in Stocks And Bonds Stolen From Locked Car

Stocks and bonds valued at about $20,000, most of which are not negotiable, were stolen from a locked automobile Thursday night, Samuel Taylor, Minneapolis, Minn., automobile dealer, reported to police yesterday. The theft occurred while the Taylor sedan was parked in the 1400 block of Belmont street northwest.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, who are visiting the latter's sister, Mrs. J. H. Sinclair, 2325 Fifteenth street northwest, were on their way from Minneapolis to Miami, Fla.

Mrs. Sinclair stated that payments had been stopped on all the stocks and bonds. Thieves broke open a rear window of the sedan and then opened the rear door, she said. About $250 of personal clothing also was stolen, police reported.

Mrs. Raymond Given Divorce From Her 8th

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Virginia Overshiner Patterson Anonymous Starke Seeger Gilbert Kahn Cogswell Raymond was awarded a walk in the marital game today on two called strikes.

Circuit Judge Henry J. Ingram granted her an uncontested divorce from her eighth husband, Orchestra Leader Dick Raymond. She waived alimony. The former contest winner testified he struck her twice—once on the night of their marriage last Sunday in a Chicago hotel and again last Tuesday in a Peoria hostelry.

Suspect Seized In 'Numbers' Racket Murder

Alleged 'Boss' Held, Aide Hunted for Killing Runner Who Was Too Clever.

An alleged "boss numbers operator" was arrested by police last night and held for questioning in the "racket" murder of Sam Jefferees, 37, colored, of the first block Florida avenue northwest.

Jefferees was fatally shot near Camp Springs, Md., last Thursday, and died at Casualty Hospital Saturday night. He said two white men were his assailants.

The prisoner, whose name was not divulged, was arrested in what police are certain was the death car in the case in downtown Wash- Precinct Detective William Gest. tective Sergt. Robert Barrett and Precinct Detercive William Gest.

They booked the suspect for investigation and set out to search for the second man in the case, also an alleged numbers operator.

The shooting culminated a scheme Jefferees had for defrauding those who employed him as a "numbers runner" and were unfamiliar with the city and system here.

According to police information, his scheme was to get his information of the mutuel total of the first race at a certain track, which would be the first digit of the winning number, then play the 100 combinations under various names, one of which was certain to win.

Damage Suit Dismissed Against Floyd Gibbons

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—A $250,000 damage suit against Floyd Gibbons, radio news commentator, was dismissed today by Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora.

Charles Locke, a script writer, charged Gibbons with changing his copy in a broadcast about an Ohio Valley flood-last January and causing him to lose his job. Justice Pecora ruled that the plaintiff failed to state cause for action.

Will of Ruth Roland Contested by Father

Los Angeles, Oct. 8 (AP).—The will of Ruth Roland, star of silent movie serials, disposing of her $1,000,000 estate, was contested today by her father, John R. Roland, sr., who was left $100. He charged that Ben Bard, husband of the actress, "dictated and suggested the terms of the document and it was not a free and voluntray act." Bard was left the bulk of the estate.

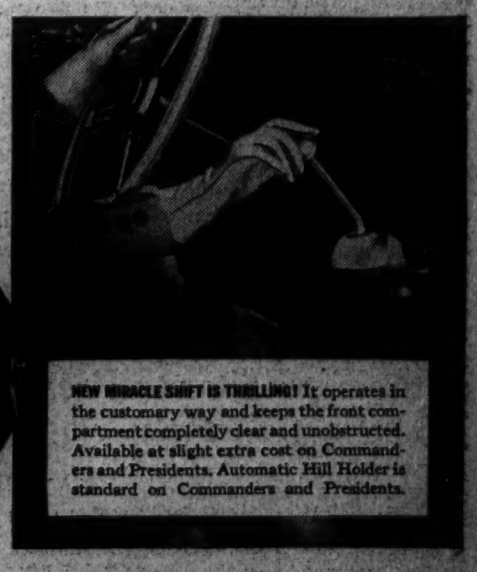
BIG SAVINGS EVERY MILE ON GAS AND OIL! The famous Fram oil cleaner is standard equipment on all 1938 Studebaker models. And Studebaker's advanced economy engineering assures remarkably low gas consumption. Gas-saving automatic overdrive is available at slight extra cost.

REFRESHINGLY new in every vigorous flowing line, the impressively big new 1938 Studebaker, in three short weeks, has become the toast of the nation.

One ride in it is all the selling it needs. It's the steadiest, sturdiest, easiest handling, most comfortable car that a little money ever bought. Independent planar wheel suspension, finest hydraulic shock absorbers and optional automatic overdrive combine to give it riding qualities you never dreamed any car would have. It's overflowing in every inch with luxury that would be remarkable in a very expensive car. It has symmetrical direct-action steering, safety glass all around, twin tail lamps, sun visors and windshield wipers, rattle-proof rotary door locks, horizontal transmission with flat front floor, underslung hypoid gear rear axle.

Drive a new 1938 Studebaker 25 miles and you'll never be happy with any other car.

EVERY RIDE IS A MIRACLE RIDE in every 1938 Studebaker. Independent planar wheel suspension and finest hydraulic shock absorbers are standard no-extra-charge equipment on all 1938 models and provide comfort you never enjoyed in any car before.



NEW MIRACLE SHIFT IS THRILLING! It operates in the customary way and keeps the front compartment completely clear and unobstructed. Available at slight extra cost on Commanders and Presidents. Automatic Hill Holder is standard on Commanders and Presidents.

Reality of Death Is Sermon Topic

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Romans 8:2. "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Lord is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble, and He knoweth them that trust in Him." (Nahum 1:7).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Marvels, calamities, and sin will much more abound as truth urges upon mortals its resisted claims, but the awful daring of sin destroys sin, and foreshadows the triumph of truth."

Christ Church Existed 5 Years Before City Was Made Capital

Tobacco Barn on New Jersey Avenue in Southeast was First Episcopal House of Worship Here; Present Structure Dates From 1807.

Christ Church, the mother parish of the Capital's Protestant Episcopal denomination, came into existence five years before Washington was made the seat of the Government. When local Episcopalians wished to found a parish in 1795 they had to apply for a charter from the Maryland Assembly.

The first meetings were held in a ramshackle building on New Jersey avenue near D street southeast, which formerly had been used as a tobacco barn. The location was so inconvenient for most of the parishioners that the rector often preached an afternoon sermon in the corridor of the War Office as well.

The present structure dates from 1807, although it has undergone many alterations. Three free pews were set aside when it was built—one for the rector, one for the donor of the building site and one for the President of the United States. Presidents Jefferson, Madison and Monroe worshiped there.

The same year in which the building was completed, the vestry of the church voted to set aside 30 acres on the north shore of the Anacostia River for a burial ground. The name of the cemetery appears on the records sometimes as the Washington Parish Burial Ground, sometimes as the Washington Cemetery. Since 1811, however, when Congress reserved a section for the interment of Government officials, the place has been referred to in popular usage as the Congressional Cemetery.

Buried there are Elbridge Gerry, of Massachusetts, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, whose name and political tactics gave rise to the phrase "gerrymandering;" Push-Ma-Ta-Ha, Choctaw Indian chief who fought under Jackson in the Pensacola campaign and died here of diphtheria while negotiating a treaty between the United States and his people; 16 Senators, and 69 Representatives.

Other famous persons, including George Clinton, first Governor of New York, were interred in the Congressional Cemetery and later reinterred in their home States. For years officials' graves were marked with sandstone blocks. In 1877, a member of the Senate rose to announce that the prospect of burial under one of these atrocities added a new terror to death, and an act was passed forthwith abolishing erection of the unsightly cenotaphs.

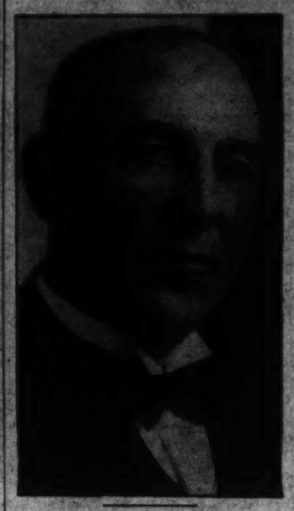
Activity Called Key Principle of Christian Faith



By the Rev. William H. LaRue,
Pastor, Takoma Park Baptist Church.

The Christian religion enjoins activity. It reclares that "faith without work is dead." It was said of its founder, Jesus Christ, "He went about doing good." He taught His disciples, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works."

Religion is simply right living. It looks upward to God and outward to all mankind. It transforms private life and fits it for public expression.

The Christian religion has grown to be the largest in number and the most universal and this because of the sacrificial efforts of its devotees.

Christianity, unfortunately, presents a divided front before a very needy world. One sure way of procedure toward greater unity and better understanding is for every group of Christians to be more zealous of good works. As a good mother recently said to me, "Christians should so live that none need ever think of their church connections."

Christian businessmen are bidden to be wideawake ,employing the motive that they may have in order that they may help the more. All are to be fervent in spirit, that is, earnest, keen and eager, to help in lifting the standards of living. To be of some helpful service to one's generation is the ideal set before us.

Let the nonreligious person consider that life without morality is intolerable and that public and private morals will not prevail without the support of religion. Those who may be inclined to criticize and discredit what the churches have done and are doing might come in and give us the benefit of their wisdom and efforts.

All church people should be aware of the urgent need of better churchmanship. The moral and spiritual dearth of today is largely due to bad churchmanship. The call goes forth to fill up these empty pews that dishearten a minister, depress the worshipers and that impress the casual visitor with the feebleness of religious interest. Fill up those empty treasuries that make church activities difficult and progress well nigh impossible. More good churchmanship is the direct need of our day. In other words, let us have more activity in religious life and work.

Britain Pledges Stand With U.S. To End 2 Wars

had landed at Algeciras, in southern Spain.

Chamberlain reminded powers inclined to war that Britain is rearming "on the vastest scale we ever attempted" in peacetime.

"Three days ago the attention of the world was arrested by a clarion call from the other side of the Atlantic, as welcome as it was timed in its utterance," ht said.

Will Co-operate.

"Hitherto it has been assumed the United States, the most powerful country in the world, would remain content with a frankly isolationist policy.

"But Mr. Roosevelt has seen that if what he calls an epidemic of world lawlessness is allowed to spread, no country will be safe from attack.

"In his declaration of the necessity for a return to belief in the pledged word and the sanctity of treaties, he has voiced the convictions of this country as well as his own, and in his call for concerted effort in the cause of peace, this government will be wholeheartedly with him."

Declaring Britain and France still are waiting and hoping for a favorable reply on their invitation for tripower talks aimed to get Italians out of Spain, Chamberlain said:

"If we could once make real progress toward settlement of the Spanish problem, the way would be opened to those conversations which formed the subject of recent correspondence between Signor Mussolini and myself."

The letters were believed to have held out a promise of belligerent rights for Spanish insurgents and recognition of Ethiopia in return for Italian withdrawal from Spain.

Chamberlain declared he had little doubt but that the United States would join a nine-power effort to curb the war in the Far East.

(Signers of the nine-power pact which guarantees the territorial integrity of China were invited by the League of Nations Assembly Wednesday to consider ways of making their guarantee effective.)

"Although in neither case has there been a formal declaration of war, there are in fact two major wars in progress," Chamberlain said, referring to the Sino-Japanese and Spanish civil conflicts.

"Sickening Spectacle."

"Both of them are being characterized by the use of bombing planes and in both cases noncombatants, men, women and children, are being killed and mutilated by action of aerial weapons. . . .

"It is a sickening and horrifying spectacle from which the mind revolts, and it has aroused in many countries the strongest feelings and indignation at its inhumanity—and sympathy with its helpless victims."

He said, however, there was "some danger lest these natural human feelings should miss the real point"—that of "having to resort to force at all, in contradiction to engagements solemnly entered into, without even an attempt to settle differences by peaceful discussion and negotiations.

Chamberlain frankly cautioned that "until the world recovers its sanity, there can be no halt in the process of rearming this country."

Reviewing the vast rearmament program into which Britain has plunged, he said "the navy personnel is being extended at a rate never attempted before in the time of peace . . .

"Powerful airplanes unsurpassed in design and equipment are steadily coming forward from manufacturers . . .

"In the space of two years the strength of our home-based force has been nearly trebled, an expansion at a rate and scale never attempted before."

Italy Strengthens Libya.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London, Oct. 8.—Word of additional Italian military activity in North Africa and perhaps in Spain reached London tonight as Italy drafted a note informing Great Britain and France that she will recall her "volunteer" troops from Spain only on Premier Mussolini's own terms.

Italy's rejection for an Anglo-French bid for a tri-power conference on the volunteer question will be delivered "within 24 hours," the foreign office was officially informed.

The Spanish crisis was aggravated by an announcement in Rome that Italian garrisons in Libya are to be strengthened. The Libyan reinforcements were generally interpreted here as an indirect threat to Great Britain, through Egypt, on the eve of Mussolini's rejection of the Anglo-French note.

Japanese Have Declared War, Defenders at Shanghai Feel

rations disapproving Japanese military actions in China.

Japanese naval vessels in the Whangpoo River launched a second bombardment of Pootung, industrial area across the Whangpoo from the International Settlement.

The warcraft started the second bombardment less than 24 hours after what the Japanese described as a Chinese shelling of the Hongkew area of the settlement, where Japanese civilians live. Yesterday Japanese army authorities made an implied threat to raze the area unless Chinese stopped shelling Hongkew.

Warns of Propaganda.

"I wish to address the Chinese people, hoping that they will resort to proper introspection and view the unfortunate situation (at Shanghai) in its true light," Matsui's new statement said.

"For China to attempt national solidarity at the cost of fostering antiforeign and anti-Japanese policies would be a far cry from a desire to build international fellowship and maintain peace.

"Making deft use of anti-Japanese propaganda, China prevoked Japan with resulting destruction of international good-will and crumbling of peace in the Orient. What concerns Japan most is that China and Japan co-operate in maintaining peace in the Orient.

"However, with China ideologically and sentimentally adhering to an anti-Japanese policy, Japan has no alternative other than to eradicate the evil at any cost."

As stated before, we entertain no ill will toward noncombatants. We desire to protect them from the horrors of conflict. I urge them to remain away from danger zones."

Japan's strong efforts to control the opposition it has met in North China were shown again today in reports from Tientsin. Japanese advices said the army there promulgated a military law providing penalties ranging from fines to death sentences for "traitorous acts and espionage committed by non-Japanese."

(Reports from Peiping said the Japanese last night occupied Chengtingfu, 150 miles southwest of Peiping. Capture of the city was said to have put Japanese within striking distance of the fortified Chinese line at Shihkiachwang, 8 miles south.

(Japanese armies in North China apparently were attempting to reach the Yellow River by October 10, the Chinese national holiday. Main objectives were Isinan and Taiyuanfu, in Shantung Province.)

500,000 for New Battle.

Shanghai (Saturday), Oct. 9.—China and Japan were prepared today to hurl an estimated 500,000 men into the bloodiest battle of the undeclared war.

Both sides expected a great final battle to end the long struggle for control of the lower Yangtze River valley would start this week-end.

after his return to the White House, but cautioned them at the start that he would be unable to discuss foreign affairs. He then declined to reply to specific questions dealing with plans contemplated to implement his Chicago statement of policy, the question of revision of the neutrality act, the site for the Nine-Power Treaty meeting and the identity of this country's delegate.

Later Secretary Hull, Welles and Davis called for a talk, which had been allotted 30 minutes on the President's program, but which continued for an hour and a half. At his own press conference the Secretary was as uncommunicative as Mr. Roosevelt. He said he and his aides had had a general discussion of international conditions with the President, but there was nothing of a nature that could be discussed.

As a result of the Mallet-Wilson talk it was expected the date and place for the conference of powers will be announced within two or three days. It was made clear the United States still is waiting for an invitation to the meeting, taking the view the conference actually is sponsored by the League of Nations Assembly, which voted instructions to its members who signed the treaty to convoke the other signers.

The treaty pledges its signers, now 14 in number, to maintain the territorial and administrative integrity of China, and both the League Assembly and the United States hold that Japan, one of the signers, has violated its provisions.

It was indicated Mallet and Wilson considered only preliminary matters in connection with the conference, and did not go into the subject of proposals of courses of action or the extent to which this country would go in taking concerted steps to bring the Far Eastern fighting to an end.

The suggestion of a united economic boycott against Japan, a course backed by the American Federation of Labor convention in Denver, still was being widely discussed, though American officials firmly declined comment on possible steps.

Proposals for an economic boycott against Japan were criticized last night in the closing session of a three-day conference of the National Council for the Prevention of War. A resolution adopted declared such a step would "aggravate rather than improve the situation," the reasons given for the conclusion including:

It would increase the suffering of the Chinese by speeding up and intensifying the Japanese attack; military nationalist leaders of Japan would be given a new and psychological appeal to those of their people who now are opposed to their program; a boycott would fall indiscriminately upon innocent women and children in Japan as well as upon American merchants and producers; it would "ultimately affect millions of people in this country," and tend toward "world economic depression;" a "much more effective method of eliminating war" would be "removing racial discrimination and giving freer access to raw materials and markets to people like the Japanese."

Poll of U. S. Senators and Representatives Opposes American Stand on Far East Crisis

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Oct. 8.—The Inquirer said tonight United States Senators and Representatives voted nearly 3 to 1 against co-operating with the League of Nations in sanctions or active intervention against Japan in a poll conducted by the newspaper.

The question asked the members of Congress was:

"If pronouncements of United States and League of Nations condemning Japan as aggressor in Far East war prove ineffectual, would you favor or oppose our co-operating with League either in sanctions or active intervention?"

Returns up to tonight showed 14 for co-operation, 37 against co-operation and 6 noncommittal.

The Inquirer said those voting for co-operation were:

Republicans, Senator Warren R. Austin, Vermont; Representative E. Harold Cluett, New York.

Farmer-Labor, Representative Henry G. Teigan, Minnesota.

Democrats: Representatives Ira W. Drew, Francis E. Walter, Michael J. Stack, Leon Sacks, James H. Gildea, all Pennsylvania; John S. McGroarty, California; Alfred M. Phillips, Connecticut; Samuel B. Pettengill, Indiana; Thomas O'Malley, Wisconsin; Ross A. Collins, Mississippi; William H. Sutphin, New Jersey; Maury Maverick, Texas; Andrew J. May and Emmet O'Neal, Kentucky; T. Alan Goldsborough, Maryland; William A. Ashbrook, Ohio; J. Mark Wilcox, Florida; Lyle H. Boren, Oklahoma, and Richard M. Atkinson, Tennessee.

Republicans, Senator William E. Borah, Idaho; Representatives Roy O. Woodruff, George A. Dondero and Clare E. Hoffman, Michigan; U. S. Guyer, Kansas; N. M. Mason and Chester Thompson, Illinois; J. Will Taylor, Tennessee; Usher L. Burdick, North Dakota; Ralph O. Brewster, Maine; Robert F. Rich, Pennsylvania; Francis H. Case, South Dakota; Lloyd Thurston, Iowa; Fred J. Douglas and Hamilton Fish, New York; Arthur B. Jenks, New Hampshire; Thomas A. Jenkins, Ohio.

Progressive, Representative Harry Sauthoff, Wisconsin.

Those the Inquirer listed as noncommittal on the question were:

Rail Traffic Up 4.3%.

By the Associated Press.

Railroads in the United States carried 246,917,594 passengers in the first six months of 1937, 4.3 per cent more than in 1936, with none of them losing his life in a train accident, the American Association of Railroads said yesterday.

The Problem Of Cotton.

Based on conditions as of October 1, the Department of Agriculture forecasts a cotton crop of 17,573,000 bales.

That would be the second largest crop on record, the all-time high yield being 17,977,000 bales produced in 1920. But it is to be noted that the present huge crop has been raised on 34,200,000 acres—far less than the area planted during the decade 1924 to 1933, when the average approximated 42,000,000 acres. The current staggering estimates, therefore, are due to the extraordinarily high anticipated yield per acre.

The showing is certainly not one to gladden the hearts of those who rely upon acreage restrictions to regulate production. In fact, it shows unmistakably that good weather and other factors have conspired together to defeat all preliminary calculations. Farmers with reduced acreage have been using more fertilizer and cultivating more intensively, and nature has been kind at least in the sense of being bounteous.

The export outlook for our cotton crop is also far from encouraging in view of the high level of production in foreign countries. Last year the foreign cotton crop reached a new high of 18,000,000 bales, and this year it may total 19,500,000 or 20,000,000 bales as contrasted with a figure of from ten to eleven million bales in the decade before 1934.

Undoubtedly the artificially high level at which we have maintained cotton prices under a restrictionist regime has been a large factor in stimulating the extension of cotton growing in foreign lands. Markets lost to these foreign growers will not be easy to recapture at any price, since for many reasons other countries desire to be less dependent upon American cotton to supply their needs. This attitude has, of course, been stiffened by our price-raising experiments, which take toll of foreign consuming industries like textile manufacturing.

Declines in cotton prices, bringing quotations in futures down to the lowest levels reached since the spring of 1933, will undoubtedly increase the pressure for Federal intervention. Failure of acreage restriction as a means of control of output and prices simply directs attention to other methods of raising prices or subsidizing cotton growers. Various suggestions for meeting the situation—all of them open to serious objections—have been made by Secretary Wallace.

It is not surprising that he should wring his hands, metaphorically speaking, whenever he thinks about the large carryover in prospect. But it is surprising that he still has faith in the ability of the Government to find a remedy for economic maladjustments that have been aggravated by past misguided efforts at control.

By the overwhelming majority of 2,116,000 to 331,000 the British Labor Party at its annual conference has rejected a proposal that it align itself with the Communists in a "popular front" akin to that established in France.

This action accurately reflects the inherent conservatism of the British Labor movement, which now, as heretofore, has as little use for communism as for fascism. In the eyes of the great majority of British Laborites both of these extremist ideologies are equally antagonistic to democratic institutions and human liberties. They want none of either.

But an equally valid explanation for decisive rejection of the Communist bid for co-operation is the absence of any compelling reason for a "popular front" in Great Britain. The presumption behind the consolidation of left-wing forces achieved in France and Spain was the existence of a potentially dangerous Fascist movement. There is no such movement in Great Britain.

The antics of Sir Oswald Mosley and his henchmen constitute more of a nuisance than a threat. On the other hand, creation of a "popular front" might give the numerically tiny British Communist Party a foothold in the Labor movement which it does not now possess, and would provide it with opportunities for influence hitherto withheld by the leaders of both the political and industrial arms of British labor.

Moreover, in a very real sense, a "popular front" is already in existence in Great Britain. It is not limited to Socialists and Communists. It is an instinctive collaboration between all elements which are alarmed by the spectacle of British weakness in the face of the pretensions of the Fascist dictators. These elements are determined that unified support for the rearmament program shall be symbolic of unity in defense of democratic principles of government.

The Two Plague Centers.

At the moment the problem of how to establish and consolidate peace in the world appears to most Americans as one primarily bound up with the situation in the Far East.

Japan's undeclared war on China obviously touches us much more closely than what is happening in Spain. The Japanese aggression threatens defeat for our traditional diplomatic policy in the Orient, injures long-standing American interests, both cultural and commercial, and additionally outrages deep-seated American instincts and sympathies. But it would be a serious mistake to lose sight of the fact that in Europe also, in the words of President Roosevelt, "the landmarks and traditions which have marked the progress of civilization toward a condition of law, order and justice are being wiped away."

The President himself made that abundantly clear in his Chicago speech. Denouncing the "present reign of terror and international lawlessness," he referred in thinly veiled language not only to the attack on China but also to intervention in Spain.

These two countries, though far removed from each other geographically, are both the victims of similar external aggressors. Any "concerted effort" by the peace-loving nations to "quarantine" the disease of militarism must, therefore, consider the affected areas in both Europe and the Orient.

At the moment the attention of Great Britain and France is naturally centered far more upon the Spanish problem than upon the Far Eastern situation. The patience of the two great European democracies has been severely strained by Mussolini's interventionist activities in the Iberian Peninsula. They are pressing him to recall his organized armies of "volunteers" and to make possible a Spanish settlement conforming with the will of the Spanish people. And in this endeavor the moral support given them by President Roosevelt in his Chicago speech may prove of very considerable value.

This preoccupation of the Paris and London governments with a dangerous situation at their very doorsteps obviously makes it more difficult for them to assume any active leadership in a "concerted effort" against Japan. Nevertheless, there is every reason to believe that they are prepared to co-operate with us rather more effectively than we are prepared to support them in Europe.

Certainly it would be fatal to the cause of peace, everywhere, if any attempt to establish a united front of the democracies were overthrown in advance by cheap recriminations and unjustified suspicions. The point which the President emphasized above all others is that the peaceful nations are all in the same boat with reference to the problem as a whole. But just as the Spanish situation is one which obviously calls for Anglo-French leadership so, in the Far East, the scope of American action is certain to set the pace.

This is not a question of the United States going out on a limb as many Americans believe, by no means with entire justice, happened in 1932. Nothing to check aggression can be accomplished without wholehearted co-operation of all those nations interested in that end. But whereas in Europe and Africa it is Great Britain and France which perforce must play the most active role, so in the Far East and Latin America our leadership is clearly indicated.

The President's clear-cut denunciation of aggression, and his earnest summoning of the forces of peace to draw together, have created an unequaled opportunity to stem the drift to war and chaos. If that opportunity is not to be lost it must be seized, intelligently and firmly. Each of the peace-loving powers has a sphere of moral influence in which its leadership is natural. But this leadership can only be exerted if there is a general solidarity of opposition to aggression.

Antitrust Problems.

It is easy to understand Attorney General Cummings' doubt as to the wisdom of prosecuting steel companies that have submitted identical bids on Government contracts. As he says, identical bidding raises very serious antitrust problems. But it is by no means certain that the practice is illegal under the antitrust laws.

Identical bids are an outgrowth of the basing-point system of quoting prices—a practice which has existed for many years in the steel and other industries. Although the Federal Trade Commission has sharply attacked the system and denounced it as a form of illegal price fixing in cases involving the steel industry, the practice was approved under the NRA steel code and continued after the NRA ceased to exist.

The basing-point system is designed to secure a uniform marketing area for co-operating producers. It involves the selection of a common basing point from which shipping prices are calculated independent of the actual location of the producing plants. To the price established at the basing point is added freight charges from that center to destination. Given identical base prices, the result is to establish identical delivered prices, since the shipping charges are calculated from the basing point regardless of the location of the plants from which deliveries are actually made.

Not only are there differences of opinion as to the legality of this pricing method but its economic justification is a subject of never-ending controversy. There are convincing arguments seeming to show that the system destroys competition and results in wasteful cross-hauling of freight by establishing uniform prices over a wide area. Its defenders, on the other hand, insist that competition is actually promoted by putting all sellers on the same price level. Those who assert that every seller should enjoy the competitive advantages of a superior location, for instance, are told that the exploitation of such advantages would be unfair to other competitors.

Whatever view one may take of the theoretical desirability or undesirability of the basing-point system, there is no doubt that its sudden abolition would cause serious industrial dislocations. Attorney General Cummings is evidently aware of that fact and it probably accounts for his unwillingness to invoke the antitrust laws against the steel companies. Instead, he recommends an intensive study of the entire antitrust problem by a nonpartisan commission with a view to eventual revision of the law. Such an investigation would certainly serve to clarify thinking about such moot questions as basing-point systems, aside from its other advantages.

The Attorney General explains that he seeks a revision of the antitrust laws that will make them more effective without ruining businesses established in accordance with legal practices which it may now seem desirable to outlaw. There can be nothing but praise for that wise approach to a complicated and confusing problem.

To Stimulate Housing.

As the President reviews the national economic situation on his return to Washington one unfinished task is certain to come to his attention. A distinctly unfavorable factor in the present outlook is the low level of building activity. And the desirability of improvement here brings immediately to the fore the question of the administrator for the new Housing Authority.

Residential construction had been on the upswing since 1934. Substantial gains were made in 1935, 1936 and the first part of 1937. During the last few months, however, the upward trend has been checked. Since building needs are far from being satisfied, one reason for the private construction industry's hesitation may be a desire to see what sort of program the Government will launch.

The slum-clearance law enacted by Congress just before its adjournment last August cannot be expected greatly to increase residential building. A considerable period will be required to put the program into operation. Some States, for example, will have to modify their laws to take advantage of this Federal-aid arrangement. One estimate places the number of dwellings that may be built annually, after the program once gets under way, at 35,000. That is equal to about one-eighth of the homes built in 1936.

Yet this act may well have an important stimulative effect upon the building industry. There is not likely to be any real competition with private enterprise. On the contrary, the provision of decent living quarters for low-income groups should stimulate the demand for better housing all up the line. The experience of Great Britain strongly suggests that an attack upon the slums is a signal for greatly accelerated activity in the construction industry.

Results of this legislation will depend to a very large extent upon the choice of an administrator. The act necessarily leaves much discretion to the United States Housing Authority. That agency will be pioneering in a new field so far as this country is concerned. It has a unique opportunity to inaugurate practical methods of supplanting slums with attractive low-cost dwellings. Or, if directed by an inexperienced hand, there are real possibilities of an almost complete failure.

Very few projects which the Roosevelt Administration has sponsored have been more dependent upon intelligent administration for their successful operation than the new housing program. It is for this reason that attention continues to be centered upon John Ihlder, executive head of the District Alley Dwelling Authority, as the most logical choice for this assignment. In addition to being one of the country's most experienced specialists in the field of slum clearance, Mr. Ihlder has proved, through his direction of the local agency, that this activity can be carried on efficiently, economically, and to the complete satisfaction of all groups in the community.

The desirability of selecting an administrator who would at once command the support of the private building industry and all who are interested in public housing should make the President's task easy. If builders know that the new program is to be initiated with the same care and practical judgment that has gone into the A. D. A., they will doubtless be encouraged for the future. A less justifiable appointment, on the other hand, might well produce directly contrary reactions.

Some one who had little to do compiled figures showing that nearly six times as many men as women stutter. The men, of course, form this bad habit in trying to break into women's nonstop conversations.

The press reports that a man in Dallas plans to drive a golf ball from that city to Hollywood. He'll never in the world learn to control the ball as long as he tries for long drives like that.

It is impossible to tell a secret. When you tell, it's no longer a secret.

Lecture On Democracy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The purpose behind the proposed enlargement of the Supreme Court is no secret today. It is obvious that Mr. Roosevelt contemplates unleashing more legislation which may prove ill-advised, and further experiment with doubtful reforms. He may fear that these measures might be declared unconstitutional, unless he is empowered to appoint additional justices. The implication is relevant.

Impartial administration of justice is termed the highest achievement of Government and the surest bond of national unity; in consequence, it behooves those loyal to the principles of democracy to exercise more concern regarding their Government. When the people lose power they lose liberty.

Persons familiar with political trends know that concentration of power in Washington has increased and greater power is continually sought by the President.

Taypayers are now burdened by a costly bureaucracy that "always grows by what it feeds on," and a regimented economy appears probable, which is incompatible with democracy for the reason that control is necessary over the daily life of the people, requiring stringent laws—even force. Such restrictions reduce people to mediocrity and destroy self-reliance. Progress is born by individual effort and stimulated by freedom of action. Americans do not want their traditions ignored or their institutions crumbled, and when they realize where the present trend may lead they will assert their power.

An Exact Science?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It has been truly said that there is nothing more obvious than that which at first appeared to be obscure. It is equally true that all problems are simple after they have been solved.

De Kruis' book, "Men Against Death," illustrated this fact repeatedly in the history of scientific discoveries in medicine, a salient feature of all these discoveries being stubborn opposition to their acceptance by conservative leaders in medical science.

The same observation is still more true in reference to discoveries made in the more occult science of political economy and particularly so because the science of political economy is related more intimately than any other to vested rights, or, more properly speaking, vested wrongs. In fact, the force of unwholesome conservatism has succeeded very well in promoting the fiction that there is no such thing as a science of political economy, that there are no inexorable natural laws to sustain such a science.

For illustration: Adam Smith demonstrated that international free trade was scientifically right, that it was in harmony with considerations of both justice and expediency. But, although free trade between the 48 States of our Union has proved it to be right, free trade between nations has been prevented by ever-increasing tariff walls.

But in due course of time the truths of political science will prevail. HENRY WARE ALLEN.

When Congress Meets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit me to express a few thoughts on an important current question which may be new to some of your readers.

The Post of October 7 bears a large heading on the first page, "U. S. Brands Japan Aggressor and Treaty Breaker." The same issue represents the President as indicating at a recent press conference the possibility of a special session of Congress to convene between November 8 and 16 for consideration of such measures as surplus crop control, wage-and-hour laws, etc., in order to get the "spade work" done before the Christmas holidays.

It would be very interesting to know whether the President has considered in this connection the possibility that on the convening of such session his Japanese policy would precipitate a fierce controversy that would dwarf the delay of legislation that followed his sudden Supreme Court reorganization proposal.

The situation would at once become even more difficult should the Supreme Court in the meantime decide to consider the constitutionality of the Black appointment under the protests now before the Court or which may be filed by actual litigants in some early suit.

If the President could fail, as it appears he did, to foresee the clamor of some from his court proposal and from his appointment of Mr. Justice Black, it does not seem impossible that he might not consider all the consequences of the calling of a special session of Congress at this time, or, if he did, that he might not give due weight to some of the possibilities.

I, for one, will hope that at an early press conference the representatives of the press will be able to obtain the views of the President upon this question.

The President's Return.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Roosevelt's trip, undertaken with a view to inspecting wonders accomplished under the New Deal—and delivery of some non-political speeches, none of course glorifying the New Deal—is over. Incidentally, he tested the feeling of the people to see if their love of the Supreme Court and recalcitrant legislators was equal to his own. Back now, his old smiling self, but full to the brim with new fight, his manner flashes the challenge, "Recalcitrant lawmakers, look out, I'm after your pelts if it costs a billion!"

Mr. Roosevelt found no hostility. So far from Washington, a President seldom does. The national credit is sound, he told the gulls; all claims to the contrary being the lucubrations of the ignorant. The truth in this statement is that Mr. Roosevelt won't be around when rising interest rates on the debt he is sending toward its indeterminate peak chokes the forgotten man and enhances what this Administration should chiefly have concerned itself with—natural relief of unemployment.

Mr. Roosevelt can go ahead. The people—if outward evidence is accepted—are still behind their showman leader. He is still a mixture of Napoleon, Sampson, Solomon and Good Samaritan, but with modern improvements.

If Congress adheres to its declaration of independence declared last session, it will make the Executive live up to his perennial budget promise announced out West. But if it allows the court to be tied up in pink ribbons, subservient to a master's voice, this country will be headed irrevocably toward Germany's financial fate, despite suave executive assurances to the contrary. E. G. BARR.

Echo Of The Court Fight.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Roosevelt's statement that the Supreme Court wrecked the cornerstone of his "new structure" probably will appeal to political parasites, but it most certainly will not meet the approval of patriotic people, who revere the American system of government.

Who authorized President Roosevelt to erect a "new" government? Not a single voter was aware that Mr. Roosevelt had a well concealed plan in mind to pack the Supreme Court, thereby paving the way for the "new structure," prior to the election. As a matter of fact, the great majority of the American people resent Mr. Roosevelt's attempts to make the Supreme Court subservient to his will, although he is still unwilling, apparently, to accept the verdict.

Eventually, when the present spending orgy ceases, and the golden political gravy dissolves, President Roosevelt's Utopian dream castle will topple. The unthinking masses will then be brought to the realization that the American form of government, built on justice, sanity, truth, honest labor and balanced budgets, is infinitely preferable to one erected on the shifting sands of waste, intolerance, class hatred and ever-expanding deficits.

Origin Of Landslides?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to express my entire agreement with "Anti-New Deal" in your issue of October 5 explaining the Roosevelt landslide. He is right: the mentality of the average American is that of a 13-year-old child. But why stop here with explanations? Let's explain why Hamilton did not get more votes. I am sure "Anti-New Deal" would have explained this also if he had thought the illiterates could have understood him.

The Roosevelt landslide is explained by the fact that an overwhelming majority of Americans had become "fed up" on the ranting of the press and Republicans who were in a state of frenzy because they lost their place at the public trough. Roosevelt did not get a landslide of votes because people liked his smile; he got the landslide because of the "dumb" strategy (excuse the word) of the Republicans who made him votes every time they opened their mouths.

Washington's Hungry Children.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am glad to know that at least one of our "leading citizens" has come down off his pinnacle long enough to see for himself the underfed, ill-nourished children of our city. But I fail to see just why so much notice should be taken of his unbending. It still remains for us poor "led" citizens to supply the needed nourishment, as usual.

Why don't you ask some of us, sometime, about the cases that we know of, perhaps right next door, or across the street, cases with which we often share our own meager fare, while trying to scrape up enough to pay a Chest pledge practically bludgeoned out of us by our employer to make a good showing for himself, a Red Cross contribution ditto, the thousand and one taxes the poor have to pay for the privilege of being continually in debt, and union fees for the privilege of starving while on strike for we know not what.

We could tell you just how miserable are those cases. We know just what those poor little devils suffer in cold weather and wet. We also know about the thousands who do not even get to school because they have no food, little shelter and less clothing.

Maybe you don't believe it, but it is nevertheless a fact, that with educational opportunities what they are in the District, the illiteracy is out of all proportion to any estimates of population. And the abject poverty of so much of our citizenry is the primary cause of this condition.

A conducted visit to the schools won't bring out this information. It is necessary to live next door to some of the poor victims in order to learn these things; to carry home an extra pound or two of meat or an extra loaf of bread for them, when you go to market; to carry a few bushels of coal from your own none-too-well stocked bins when the wintry blasts begin to blow; to see them, finally, put on the curb, when you and other well-disposed neighbors can scarcely meet your own bills, much less contribute to pay their rent, and finally, to take these poor unfortunates into your own small home, to help them over a hard spell that never seems to end. When you have done this, then, indeed, you can get up on a platform and tell others what they ought to do, and your voice will carry the ring of sincerity.

Not what we give, but what we share
For the gift without the giver is bare
Himself, his hungering neighbor, and Me.

Beautiful Backfire.

I HAD BEEN told in advance that the picture, Topper, was a most engaging sequence of entertainment. Mr. Roland Young, always a favorite of mine, was said to be cast in a role giving him more than the usual room for whimsy and humor. But even so I was not prepared for the joys to come.

I had not been told, nor had I read enough about the movie to know, there was another big part. I refer to that played by the supercharged sports car, around which so much of the action of the story (cutely dagged by the critics as a "fantasy") takes place.

From the moment of its first entrance, I couldn't take my eyes off this futuristic buggy, and kept hoping—not in vain, as it turned out—that twists of the plot would keep it rolling before the camera.

I say the sight of it fascinated me. That's hardly accurate. What got me wasn't the eccentric design—the stream lining was much overdone—it wasn't the sight at all; it was the sound. I can hear it yet—the motor throbbed, had a pulse. It even sputtered now and then in idle moments, nervous as all get-out to jump on the open road and be off. And when it went, it roared.

I haven't heard a motor run like that in years. The automobiles of today just don't do it. It happens I am not a car owner. But I ride a lot, read the advertisements, and listen to the radio commercials. So I know the 1937 models, and can call off, I think, their good points. They have such speed, power, and comfort that you can drive at 70 and 80 without feeling it. "Without feeling it"—that's the important thing. No vibration, plenty of springs, superb balance, and all that. Complete aloofness from such commonplaces as spark plugs, crankshafts, and gears. The courteous service station man or the garage mechanic will see to all those things.

* * * *

Motors have been refined to the point where they will perform at a second's notice without a murmur. Backfires and sputtering, one-time expressions of warning and rebellion, have long since been stamped out. All the passenger hears, if anything, is a nasal purring, that changes its tone not a bit between 5 miles an hour and 80. It takes a large-faced speedometer with a long, thick pointer to tell the modern motorist how fast he's going.

Topper was humorous and entertaining. And yet to enjoy it I had to keep suppressing a nostalgic surge that persisted in calling up scenes of childhood—times when I had last heard an automobile motor (they were engines then) bleat and breathe.

There was the day my Uncle Ernest and his family, always a jump ahead of the rest of the relations, came by to show our family the new Apperson "Jack Rabbit"—and to take us for a ride, our first outside of horse and surrey. He said we could all go because it was a seven-passenger, and certainly it would be a shame to drive it out with empty seats in the hold.

We all hustled to get ready, and while my mother and sister finished dressing, my father and I had time to behold the wonders underneath the Jack Rabbit's hood. Spark plugs and wires, valves and cylinders—a whole universe of amazement, out in the open for all to see. Then while a trusted cousin turned the switch and held down the throttle inside, my uncle spun the crank, and the works came to life. There was thumping and whistling, choking, coughing and wheezing. My uncle ran around to the driver's seat—adjusted the choke and the spark lever, and then, unless my memory has turned completely romantic on me, there was heard a beautiful sound — a churning so rhythmic and dynamic it was exhilarating.

* * * *

We climbed in excitedly. My uncle shifted gears and we lunged forward. Presently we were coursing down the road. From my position astraddle the gear shift lever I watched the speedometer swing to 20, and then my uncle yelled over my head to my father:

"Don't tell the women how fast we're going. There's a straight road ahead, and I think this engine will do a thing or two."

Not long afterward my father made a deal whereby we had a car of our own. It wasn't a "Jack Rabbit" exactly, but it had plenty of assertiveness. My father spent the next four years of his life putting down revolutions under the hood of that car. My mother could never understand his patience.

"With the horses and surrey, we at least got places," she said, "if we started on time."

I sided pretty much with my father—both of us getting plenty of cracks on the back of the head from a jittery hood that was always shaking loose from its uplifted position. I know now that it wasn't patience or persistence that kept him tinkering with that cantankerous assembly of ill-tempered parts. It was the thrill he got from the thing when it worked—and it did occasionally. Just as he was due to blow up from exasperation, it would straighten up and perform magnificently. He'd pull down the throttle, and the upheaval was immediate and sure.

At such times, my father would leap behind the wheel, and I to my place in the co-pilot's seat.

"Come on," he'd shout, "let's try her out. I think we've got it now. Listen to that roar."

I must write my father to be sure not to miss seeing Topper.

'Hoodlum Nations.'

THE PRESIDENT'S speech on the hoodlum nations was a shocker, no question, the more startling because he engaged in no preliminary argument of you're anothering but just upped and busted them one. The same tone of voice a few years ago would have been much more effective, for the Nazis were less sure of themselves then, although their intentions were almost as plain as now.

As matters stand, they and the Italians are armed to the eyebrows and spoiling for a fight, and both are exporting their lunacy to other countries too weak or listless to resist. The Italians have been less troublesome here, but some of them organized their gangs a long time ago, and indulged in a little cutting and shooting with the anti-Fascist Italians, and now they are quite openly and arrogantly allied with the Nazi organizations which conduct semi-military formations on the hospitable soil of an indulgent nation.

All this may seem trivial and, in point of numbers, the combined Fascist and Nazi camps do not amount to much, but a bullet makes only a little hole going in.

• • • •

BOTH MUSSOLINI and Hitler have openly declared their contempt for democracy, the Duce, in his latest editorial, lumping it in with communism, liberalism, and everything else that he doesn't like.

Hitler's sentiments are the same and it is surely no mistake, in view of their oft-expressed detestation of American ideals, for the American President to let it be said, for the sake of the record, that the loathing is mutual, if not more so. Anyway, it certainly cannot be said that we, in this country, started this trouble, for we have never interfered in their internal affairs, as they have in ours, or even that we attempted any obstruction when they went marauding in Abyssinia or Spain.

To look ahead, as the President did, what can this country expect when the stick-up nations have taken over Spain, and, as Mussolini predicted for tomorrow, made all Europe Fascist? After Europe has been consolidated, what about us? We are a rich country actively envied and only a little less heartily hated for our success not only in material things but in governing ourselves by the consent of the governed, a matter in which they both achieved miserable failure.

Just now they are attempting to place another hostile frontier on the west of France which will take as much guarding as the German line. Grown to complete power in Europe, would they be then content and would they not want to extend themselves still further, using the same methods?

This is a case in which two men and a few hundred subordinate leaders are threatening the peaceful nations with war. No country is safe which isn't able and ready to protect itself, for they are set to pounce on any desirable spot of geography which isn't well defended, and they are only beginning to feel their muscle after years of preparation for nothing else but conquest.

• • • •

THERE IS no use attempting to reason with them, for they speak a language peculiar to their mentality which sane and honest people cannot understand. A sample of this is the statement of the spokesman of the Japanese foreign office who said it was Japan's policy "to carry on her peaceful development on the continent (China) not for the sake of the Japanese alone but for the happiness of the Chinese."

This is out of the same book in which Mussolini described his Ethiopian war as a war of defense and the same in which Hitler, while exhorting the Germans to breed, reiterates Germany is overcrowded.

Certainly, this country has no desire for war and its most warlike feeling is one of resentment against nations which threaten to force the world into war. Possibly the warning of the President, though nonspecific, will be sufficient to make the hoodlum countries back away, and avoid a rough and tumble, for they had not counted this country among their possible opponents, and their calculations may need revision and their preparations more time.

He may prove to have done the very thing that was necessary to prevent that war which they have been planning. They are now in the position of the man in the stud game with kings backed up who sees an ace fall in the next man's hand and says, "Time out; I wish to think."

The Once Over

Uncle Sam Speaking.

Uncle Sam is in a quandary and the question of the minute is whether he isn't better off in a quandary than a war.

• • • •

He knows that he doesn't make a very pretty picture saying "It's none of my business" when so many of his friends and relatives are being tomahawked, and he is beginning to wonder whether there can be strict neutrality in a barroom fight.

• • • •

After passing neutrality laws, which were conceived by the sophomore class in high school, passed by a Congress dedicated exclusively to fast-ball pitching, and so worded that a big bully is given all the breaks in a war on a weaker neighbor, Uncle Sam is taking the lilacs out of his hair and talking a little like his old self.

• • • •

It may be merely a monologue and nobody wants to see the old boy putting himself on the spot again as he did the last time he tried to straighten out a screwy world. But for the moment it is quite comforting to feel that he hasn't gone completely girlish and can still suspend piano playing when the ruffians are swarming all over the front porch.

• • • •

It seems to have been a case of perfect timing. The President suddenly leaped from Coulee Dam to Tokyo, delivering a rebuke to the ruffian nations that sounded as if somebody had dug up an old Wilson phonograph record.

• • • •

And he had hardly sounded off before the State Department joined hands with the League of Nations in denouncing Japan as a treaty breaker and the kind of man who would drive a ball into a member of his own foursome and justify it on the ground that he had a faster backswing.

• • • •

This put Uncle Sam on the same raft with 50 other nations in a sea of stout words but subject to torpedoing without notice at any moment.

• • • •

The President would quarantine the tough nations and, to revive an old gag, has lovely weather for it. The State Department talks in similarly vague terms. Honestly, justice and fair play are all on the side of the League and America, but the trouble is that Japan already has her war in high gear while we haven't even bothered to change the oil in our typewriters.

• • • •

About all we can hope for now is that the picture of Uncle Sam and those other powers taking a firm stand in the microphones and tearing up the copy of "Hearts and Flowers" will make the bully nations think twice.

• • • •

But they have such low thoughts that once is plenty.

Japan Pushing Into Chahar And Suiyuan In New Drive To Cut Off Provinces From China; Russia Threatened.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

SEVERING another province from China, the omnipotent Japanese Kwantung army has added Chahar to Nippon's rapidly growing continental possessions.

Following a ten-day campaign, accompanied by a frightful massacre of Chinese troops by the airplanes, long-range artillery and tanks of the Kwantung army, an autonomous government was set up in Kalgan by "popular demand." It follows the patterns used by the Japanese military with signal success in Manchuria and North China during the last six years.

Caught by Japanese military pincers between Kalgan and the Great Wall, the Nanking government's troops, rushed into Chahar at the outbreak of the North China incident in July, were rapidly retreating into the neighboring provinces of Suiyuan and Shansi.

Without a halt, Japanese troops and bombers continued to pursue the Chinese forces into these two provinces, with the obvious objective of securing complete control over the Inner Mongolian provinces and chastising Gen. Yen Hsi-shan, the wily "Model Governor" of Shansi and overlord of Shansi and Suiyuan.

The capture of Chahar, obscured by the Shanghai military fireworks, did not remain unnoticed by the world's strategists. The seizure of the province marked not only a new instance of territorial aggrandizement, but also foreshadowed the creation of "independent" Mongolian Empire and the appearance of a new international sore spot.

Mongols Viewed As Pawns In The Game.

IN THE COMPLICATED political and military game now played by Japan on the continent, the Mongols of Manchuria and Inner Mongolia are pawns.

The first move in this game was played by the Kwantung army in 1932, with the creation of four Mongolian provinces within the newfangled Empire of Manchukuo.

A year later, meeting with no resistance, the Kwantung army drove the opium-smoking Chinese general, Tang Yu-lin, from the mountain fastness of Jehol and assumed control over the destinies of the Mongolian tribes of the province.

Almost simultaneously, Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, head of the Kwantung army's secret service and Asia's foremost plotter, launched on his intrigues in Inner Mongolia. His activities were immediately reflected in a flare-up of long-latent disaffection in Suiyuan and Chahar.

Doihara's main attention was lavished upon Prince Teh—or Teh Wang, as he is known in China. Owen Lattimore, who knows Mongolia better than any other American, says Teh "is one of the most enlightened of the Mongol princes, and comparatively young, with progressive ideas."

Another American newspaperman described Teh Wang to me as "a bundle of ambition coated with syphilis and piles." But whatever Teh Wang's physical and moral shortcomings, he is a brilliant and active politician, an able haranguer and mass leader, a capable strategist.

Interested in the autonomy movement for many years past, Prince Teh did not become active until the creation of Manchukuo. He immediately realized the bargaining vistas opened before him by Japan's imperial plans.

He at once made it plain to both China and Japan that he was willing to make friends with the country that assured Mongols of inviolable borders, of a large degree of independence and of protection from the destructive effects of Chinese agricultural colonization.

Nanking Regime Seeks To Mollify Mongol Feelings.

THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT, unwilling to challenge the interests of the warlords of provinces contiguous upon the Mongolian areas, then engaged in a series of political maneuvers, whose apparent aim was not to satisfy, but to stifle and delay Mongolian demands.

The "tuchuns" of Shansi and Suiyuan owned vast tracts of land in Inner Mongolia which they rented out to Chinese colonists. Mongolian pastures converted into Chinese fields meant starvation for the Mongol nomads.

The Nanking government was faced with the alternative of snubbing the powerful warlords of the border areas or staving off the Mongol demands through the time-tested device of interminable negotiations, decorations and establishment of committees.

Nanking chose the latter course. This immediately resulted in a swing Japan-ward by Prince Teh and the powerful Silingol League, which he heads.

In a desperate effort to prevent a wholesale defection of the Mongol leaders in Chahar and Suiyuan provinces, the Nanking government in February, 1936, created the Mongol Autonomous Government. The apparent aim of the move was to split the Mongol princes, jealous of each other, into two fractions.

The wooing process was, however, too slow for the ambitious and hotheaded "younger" officers of the Kwantung army—majors and colonels, who infested Inner Mongolia in the capacity of special service (espionage) agents.

Chapser became the favorite resort of Japanese military empire-builders. Prince Teh was urged to become the second Genghis Khan. Japanese money, military equipment and arms were made available for him, and, finally, Japanese troops made their appearance in Chapser.

Probably not unwillingly Prince Teh succumbed to pressure and cast his die with the Japanese. When Gen. Li Shou-hsin, a Manchukuo officer masquerading as an unattached bandit for purposes of international misinformation, crossed from Jehol into Chahar early last year, Prince Teh's Mongolian cohorts co-operated in overcoming what little Chinese opposition there was.

Kwanking Army Achieved Control Of North Chahar.

THE INVADING force occupied six hsiens—magistracies—breaking the province into two parts. The southern part, including Kalgan, the provincial capital, still remained under Chinese control. The northern portion, including Chapser—Prince Teh's capital—became a gigantic void, in which the Kwantung army held an undisputed sway.

Joining forces, Gen. Li and Prince Teh next attempted to drive the six-hsien wedge deeper into Inner Mongolia, across the Chahar-Suiyuan border.

Suiyuan is governed by Gen. Fu Tso-yi—a faithful henchman of Gen. Yen Hsi-shan, the rich and crafty warlord of Shansi. Gen. Yen could not allow Prince Teh's ambitions to interfere with his revenues from his vast Suiyuan land holdings and the opium traffic from China's northwest to Peiping.

Pressure was applied upon Nanking, and simultaneously an active propaganda campaign was launched in the Chinese press. As a result, money and arms were rushed in and Suiyuan repelled the attacks of the Mongol-Manchukuo forces.

Up to that point, the Kwantung army remained content with the role of a wire-puller, supplying the Mongols with arms and funds, but giving no other support.

The guiding spirits of the Mongolian independence movement, however, were Kwantung army officers stationed in Inner Mongolia in the capacity of special service agents. One of these men, Lieut. Col. Tanaka, was described as the prime mover of the abortive attack on Suiyuan. He was later recalled to Hsinking to be reproved for his failure by the heads of the Kwantung army. Early this year, he was reportedly taken to an insane asylum.

With Hopei half cleared of Chinese troops during the Japanese operations in the Peiping-Tientsin area in July, it was only natural for the Kwantung army to make his next move in Chahar.

By this time, the province had, in addition to the provincial troops, strong units of the Nanking government's army rushed to Chahar with the commencement of hostilities near Peiping.

This force was caught between the Kwantung army, driving southward from Manchuria and the Japanese garrison in North China, hammering northward through the Great Wall. Chinese resistance was broken quickly, and the Kwantung army swept across the borders of Suiyuan and Shansi.

Russia Alarmed By Developments.

WITH Suiyuan in the immediate danger of Japanese occupation, the Mongols of the province are not expected here to resist for long the lure of Japanese arms, promises and gold. The advance of the Kwantung army and the steady retreat of the Chinese from Inner Mongolia appears to supply a strong stimulus to the expansion of the Mongolian autonomy movement.

The Message To Mussolini.

THE LONDON nonintervention committee, which came into being in the summer of 1936, was sired by Downing Street out of the Quai d'Orsay. It was a sickly creature from the start and it grew steadily weaker with each passing month. But until very recently its not-so-proud parents clung to it with grim determination.

Like Bruce Bairnsfeather's 'Ole Bill in a similar predicament they were determined to stand pat because there was "no better 'ole."

The continued faith shown in the London committee by the British and French governments was the result of a process of self-persuasion. They were convinced that the European situation would be far worse without the committee than it was with it, even though the committee's usefulness was distinctly limited.

They felt that, at least, its existence would tend to keep the Spanish conflict confined to the Iberian peninsula and that it might, in the course of time, lead to real nonintervention.

• • • •

FOREIGN OFFICES are not gullible and it is difficult to believe that, with espionage services being what they are, either Great Britain or France ever took seriously the perfervid denials by Berlin and Rome that those governments were intervening in any fashion in the Spanish civil war.

But the great European democracies were willing in the name of European peace to close their eyes as long as possible to the cynical evasion by the Fascist powers of the nonintervention accord. When Russia, taking a leaf out of Hitler's and Mussolini's book, came to the aid of the Spanish government that circumstance, too, was passed over in relative silence and for obvious reasons.

At no time was the faith in the value of the London committee more completely illustrated than after the Deutschland-Almeria incidents when Germany and Italy withdrew from the naval patrol around Spanish waters and threatened to withdraw from the London committee as well.

The latter possibility was viewed in Paris and London as something to be avoided at all costs and various inducements were held out to the Fascist powers to get them to abandon their threat.

• • • •

AS IT HAPPENED, this threat need not have been taken with undue seriousness anyway. For the London committee was a very convenient screen behind which Mussolini and Hitler could aid General Franco without fear that such action would lead France to retaliate by actively going to the aid of the Valencia regime. In other words, the nonintervention agreement tied only the hands of those powers that took their obligations seriously.

But now France and Great Britain have had their fill of the London committee.

They want nothing more to do with it unless and until it can be made to function in the way it was originally intended to function as the loyal instrument of a general will to let the Spanish fires burn themselves out. Hitherto it has been a perfect instrument with which to sabotage all efforts to make nonintervention a reality.

• • • •

BY THE SAME token, however, Mussolini has suddenly sprung to the defense of the London group. He favored having the problem of submarine piracy taken up at London. Now he favors having the question of the withdrawal of non-Spanish combatants from Spain taken up by the committee. But this is precisely what neither London nor Paris desire.

If it was not under French and British inspiration it was certainly with their approval that the League Assembly's political committee branded the London body a failure, a finding which was approved by 32 of the League's members.

So far as those powers are concerned, the double standard of international morality which was sanctified by the London committee must now be scrapped. Either the nonintervention accord must loyally be carried out in letter and spirit or the system must be scrapped.

• • • •

IT WAS IN THIS sense that, late last week, Great Britain and France addressed Italy. According to all reports, the tone of their joint note was mild. They have no desire to alienate Mussolini any more than they can help. They prefer to work with him for the appeasement of Europe if it is at all possible to do so. In this they may be following a will o' the wisp. But at least they are giving the Duce a chance to show where he really stands. He can agree to withdraw Italy's numerous troops from Spain. He may, on the other hand, send new Fascist legions to aid Franco as, in fact, it is rumored he is already doing. But he can no longer evade the issue.

If he refuses to accept the Anglo-French olive branch what then? Will the democratic powers stage another retreat? That is the great question of the moment.

Since Nyon Great Britain and France have gone a long way toward realism in their reassessment of the Spanish problem. Are they now prepared to go the rest of the way to carry out the threat which, if in veiled fashion, France has made to open its borders to volunteers and arms for loyalist Spain?

That remains to be seen. The record of the democratic powers in their dealings with the Fascist dictators is hardly an encouraging one. Still, there is Nyon as proof that, at times, London and Paris still know how to take the initiative. There is also the circumstances that, at long last, Great Britain and France have thrown overboard any illusions they may have entertained hitherto regarding the virtues of that erstwhile child of their bosom—the London committee. And, last but not least, there is the enormously valuable moral support which President Roosevelt has given the European democracies by his denunciation of Fascist intervention in Spain and his call for an international "quarantine" against aggressors.

By slow stages, with many halts and occasional backsliding, the democratic powers do appear to be on the march. It is none too soon.

Too Gentle for War

Reflection on the proposed use of acetyl chloline, a faint-producing chemical, to make war "humane" serves only to emphasize war's inescapable barbarity.

The proposal was made to the American Chemical Society meeting. Acetyl chloline introduced in the blood stream lowers blood pressure so suddenly as to induce a dead faint. Impregnated in shells of some porous substance, it would produce this instant result in anyone suffering the slightest scratch from a shell fragment. Recovery brings no ill effects. Whole regiments, said the speaker, might be put out of action and taken captive with few, if any, fatalities.

But view the matter practically. Who will use this benign chemical? What nation at war will prefer it to the more deadly shrapnel? Or, to put the case as brutally as it deserves, what nation will prefer to burden itself with a live captive, who might as easily be dead or hopelessly mutilated?

The answer, as war is waged these days, is self-evident. If shells are to be impregnated with anything, the substance more likely will be a lethal poison. And that prospect itself seems less rhetorical than actual, as one remembers what has happened meanwhile to the humane rules of war projected by the prewar Hague conferences.

War was most humane, to call it that, in the days of chivalry when it had some of the aspects of a sport. Since then, it has grown more serious and more and more brutal. Short of extermination, there seems to be no way of reversing that trend, so tragic in its meaning to humanity.

Tom McCarthy

The Little Red Schoolhouse.

"I'M AFRAID they're not acting quite natural," said Mr. Otto. "It's too bad that they're not acting quite natural."

Just at that time, another of Art Ellis' flash bulbs flew out the window and exploded with a bang. After I'd calmed down, and, convinced the youngster in the third row that holding onto my tie with a death grip was no assurance that he'd have his picture taken, I surveyed Mr. Otto with a new respect. They were acting "natural" enough to suit me.

TOM McCARTHY.

Art Ellis, one of The Post photographers, had invited me to drive out to Frederick, Md., and help him search out an old-fashioned one-room schoolhouse. I had thought there might be a story in it and, as we drove along, I was getting downright nostalgic.

Not that I'd ever gone to a one-room schoolhouse, but I'd talked with people who had. I conjured up visions of freckle-faced youngsters, trooping in barefooted, depositing their willow-branch fishing poles in the corner and seating themselves for a day's woodcarving on the old desk top.

Yes, I looked forward to a one-room schoolhouse, as the realm of Tom Sawyers and Huck Finns. So I told Art that I'd be glad to go along.

• • • •

WELL, WE FOUND the one-room schoolhouse, all right. It was a neat, yellow, frame building, located up a little hill from Weeverton, Md. It filled all the specifications and, as we drove up, we could see that some of the kids were actually barefooted.

We got out of the car, loaded with camera tripods and flash bulbs, and then came the first surprise of the day. I don't know whether the kids looked at Art, or at me, but in any event, one of us must have looked suspicious. "Kidnapers," they yelled, and a good two dozen of them scooted for the open door of the schoolhouse.

"Kidnapers," piped one of the "kids" in the back row and then they all started to laugh.

The teacher held up his hand, and the laughter died down. Later, when Art and I took command of the schoolroom, I began to marvel at how the teacher did it. Maybe we just weren't cut out for teachers.

But Mr. Ronald Otto, who presides at the Abner Bingham School up the hill from Weeverton, has had 18 years of experience in just such one-room schools. Maybe that makes the difference.

We told Mr. Otto that we'd like to make some pictures of his pupils. For some of the pictures, we asked Mr. Otto to carry on his regular session of class and then, for some of the other pictures, we asked permission to pose the children. That was our big mistake. We should have left Mr. Otto in complete command.

• • • •

EVERYTHING WENT smoothly, while Art was getting general views of the classroom and catching a candid view of Third Grader Beverly Bingham, whose grandfather built the school, passing along a note from one of the Fauble boys.

The third grade busied itself with silent reading. The fifth grade was having a tough time with fractions and the first-graders, scared and squirming, looked out at us over the protective covers of their books.

Billy Forbes, who is 8 years old and just starting in this year, was trying to pick a pencil from the floor with his toes. Russell Munday, who is 14 and the best baseball player at the school, lounged back in his seat, on the fourth-grade side of the room, to get a better view of the tree-shaded meadow, which serves the school as a ball diamond. And Elva Fauble, all blushes and smiles, was telling me that most of the girls liked to play baseball better than they liked to play with dolls.

Yes, everything was going along fine at that point and we should have had sense enough to realize that our luck was holding out only because Mr. Otto was in command. However, Art decided to move things around a bit to pose the children and Mr. Otto informed the children that from then on they were to take orders from us.

We thought that was very kind of Mr. Otto . . . at first.

"All right, children," I said.

"Hurray," yelled the kids.

My next "all right, children" was gauged a tone higher, but it was blocked just north of the Adam's apple. I think I got the "All" part out, before one of the Fauble boys, or one of the Higdons, grabbed my tie and hung on. He wanted to have his picture taken, if he had to choke me into submission.

When I'd shaken him loose, and released my tie, I looked around for Art.

"Now, boys," said Art.

He was answered by a terrific "boom," as another of his used flash bulbs sailed through the window toward the big rock outside the schoolhouse.

• • • •

ART'S PLAINTIVE "Now, boys" was lost in the torrent of shouts which surged around him. They wanted their pictures taken and they didn't mean maybe. Right about then, I decided it was time to find Mr. Otto. I didn't mind it, as long as they just raced around the room and climbed in and out of the windows. But, when I heard Art let go a fervent "Hey, look out!" and saw him make a wild grab toward an upraised hand on the point of launching a perfectly good flash bulb through the window, I thought it was time to call a halt.

Mr. Otto came back and things quieted down. Art, however, was a glutton for punishment. He wanted to get a picture of the school just as it was dismissed for the day.

Mr. Otto explained to the kids just what we wanted and, while Art set up his camera, I told them that when I called "Stop" they were to stop and return to school. This was just going to be "make believe."

Well, I guess the kid in the blue overalls didn't hear anything but the words "school dismissed," for he lit out of there like a streak of chain-lightning and after Art had caught the picture, I felt it my duty to run him down. I felt we owed that to Mr. Otto, anyway.

I made pretty good time at first and almost got within calling distance of the kid in the blue overalls. But when my wind gave out, he was just getting warmed up.

I believe Mr. Otto resumed school with 25 pupils rather than the customary 26.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

Reward of Merit

By Scott Hart.

There was a merit system in the Government for T. F. Wilson, native Washingtonian.

He has been appointed acting director of personnel, Farm Credit Administration — and that's a long upward step from the days when he was a messenger boy in the Government Printing Office. Now he is only 39.

T. F. WILSON.

Wilson was educated in Washington public schools, was messenger when 16; was graduated from Columbia University; served abroad as a chief petty officer in the Navy during the World War, and all told has some 22 years of experience in clerical, administrative, personnel and efficiency work for the Government behind him.

Wilson came to the F. C. A. in 1933, at the time when the scattered Federal Farm Loan agencies were being co-ordinated to build a complete co-operative service to agriculture. Then he served first as personel investigator, and in 1935 was appointed chief of the Classification Section. In February, 1936, he became assistant director of personnel. Now, as head of the Personnel Division, he succeeds Dick Carlson, who left to do personnel consulting work and teach at the University of California.

Previously Wilson was employed for several years in the Efficiency Bureau of the Federal Government and served with the AAA. For a time he was employed as economist by one of the largest oil companies in Oklahoma.

An ardent and fancy bowler, Wilson is one of the directors of the F. C. A. Bowling League. Otherwise, he has gained a reputation in fishing, ping-pong and golf. He makes his home in Woodridge with Mrs. Wilson and their 17-year-old daughter.

The Commercial Education Service of the Office of Education (Interior Department) wants to know of two C. A. F. 3 stenographers, salary $1,620, who have been teachers of high school commercial subjects and who are eligible for transfer or appointment from the civil service register. It is expected that authorization for these appointments will be made soon. Inquiries should be directed to room 2324, South Interior Building, or telephone District 8388, extension 2343.

A harbinger of fall: The West Virginia State Society of the District of Columbia announces that its first reception and dance of the season will be held in the ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel on Thursday evening, October 21. The society officers are David S. Davidson, president; John L. Bateman, recording secretary; Mrs. Ada C. Shinn, financial secretary; Col. J. William DeGrange, treasurer; Col. D. W. Gall, historian, and vice presidents as follows: A. Hood Phillips, Miss Mayme H. Hamrick, E. T. Morgan, Mrs. Emma E. Nunnally, James P. Moriarty and John W. Smith.

Four employes of the Government Printing Office will retire from the service at the close of this month, one of these with 33 years of service to his credit. They are William J. Eckhardt, 636 A street northeast, an electrician, 33 years; Annie C. Jordan, 3310 Quesada street northwest, a cylinder pressfeeder, 29 years; Fletcher V. Shipley, 1342 Eastern avenue, proofreader, 31 years, and Alexander B. Stewart, 1108 Thirteenth street northwest, a bindery operative, 30 years.

Four Government workers here have been honored by the American Chemical Society. Dr. Charles Albert Browne, supervisor of chemical research, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, Agriculture Department, is elected to the society's executive committee, division of the history of chemistry and sugar chemistry. Horace S. Isbell, Bureau of Standards, is elected chairman of the sugar chemistry division; Raymond M. Hann, National Institute of Health, has been appointed to the executive committee of that division. Alden J. Emory, Bureau of Mines, is elected to the executive committee of the gas and fuel chemistry division.

In line with Dick Carlson's resignation (mentioned elsewhere in this column) changes in designation are made in the F. C. A. Personnal Office, as follows: Miss Mary Mathis as acting chief of the Washington Personnel Section; Philip M. Mayer, as acting chief of the Classification Unit.

The A. F. G. E.'s parent, the A. F. of L., is expected to support the A. F. G. E. legislative program in every particular and will shove certain legislation on its own score which would benefit the Government workers, it is stated at the A. F. G. E. national headquarters.

First off, is the Walsh-Healy act, setting up standards of wages and working conditions on Government contract work. "This is important both to Government employes and to those in private employment, for prior to enactment of the Walsh-Healy measure Government manufacturing plants were constantly threatend by cut-throat competition from private plants where standards of wages and working conditions were at a minimum. Both classes of workers have benefited from the law, and the A. F. of L. plans to have it strengthened as much as possible."

The William Green organization also is "much interested" in S. 714 which would prevent making age a barrier to Government employment, so far as the Civil Service Commission is concerned. The Federation also finds interst in 30-year optional retirement and general extension and liberlization of the retirement laws.

Forty or more members of the U. F. W. A. Treasury Department local attended a tea on Thursday in the new U. F. W. A. offices. They had as guests a number of ladies employed in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Presiding at the affair were Mrs. Gertrude Kessler, Mrs. Pauline Hirsch, Edith Krieger and Jean Klonin. Jacob Baker, president, U. F. W. A. spoke briefly.

Members of the Minnesota State Society expect an enjoyable afternoon today in the Mirror Room of the Lafayette Hotel, what with cocktails, speculations on the World Series outcome and home-State talk.

August Decrease Of 933 Shown in Government Jobs

A decrease of 933 employes in the executive branch of the United States during August was listed in statistics released yesterday by the Civil Service Commission.

The report stated there were 848,243 employes in this branch of the Government at the end of August, 1937. The August pay roll was $126,746,806, as compared to $126,974,578 in July.

There was an increase of 483 in employment in the District of Columbia and a decrease of 1,416 outside the District, bringing the total number of employes in the District to 111,770 and the total outside the District to 736,473 Government workers.

Of the total employes in the service, 76,359 were administrative employes paid from funds provided by the emergency relief appropriation acts of 1935, 1936 and 1937.

The Department of Agriculture listed a decrease of 3,846 employes, principally part-time seasonal employes hired in the AAA, Forest Service, Resettlement and Soil Conservation Service.

D. C. Shoe Workers Get Shorter Week, Pay Rise

Five agreements, granting 48-hour weeks and from 20 to 40 per cent increases in wages, were signed yesterday by the United Shoe Workers of America, Local 136, it was announced.

Shops affected were the Blue Flame Valet, Eleventh and F streets northwest; Liberty Valet Service, 1412 H street northwest; Jimmy's Repair Shop, 633 F street northwest, and 943 Pennsylvania avenue northwest; Sam's Repair Shop, 906 D street northwest, and Girtz Repair Shop, 1339 Seventh street northwest.

Wholesale Meat Prices Decrease

Sharp declines in the wholesale prices of fresh pork cuts and of dressed lamb have featured the meat trade during the past few days, the Washington office of the Institute of American Meat Packers reported yesterday.

The institute said fresh pork loins have dropped approximately 32 per cent since the middle of September and are now at levels from 4 to 11 per cent lower than at this time a year ago. Other declines reported were: fresh pork shoulder, 16 per cent lower; spare ribs, 9 per cent lower; Boston butts, 19 per cent lower.

Insurgent Flier's Camera Records Aerial Warfare Over Spain

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

How Spanish Insurgents Start a Bombing Expedition

These are the first pictures to be obtained directly from a combat library of aviation forces participating in the Spanish conflict. Photos were made by an insurgent pilot during a bombing expedition. Striking view above shows Squadron F-9, commanded by Maj. Mutti, an Italian pilot flying for the insurgents, soaring away on a routine bombing expedition. At left, how a 500-pound bomb (circle) appears dropping from a bombing plane. Photo below shows how a highway (left) and a railroad track (right) were "nailed" on the Santander front by direct hits from an insurgent plane. Both of the pictures were made on the same flight.

Ceremony Takes Place in the Evening at Church in Cambridge.

Of wide interest in Washington was the marriage of Miss Mary Whittington Maguire, of Cambridge, Md., and Eugene Landon Streagle, of Gloucester, Va., which took place last evening at Grace M. E. Church South in Cambridge, with the Rev. Jesse H. Hobbs officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Reginald Maguire. She wore a gown of white satin and veil of tulle and lace with a coronet of pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor was Miss Helen Doenges. She wore American Beauty moire and carried cream roses. Miss Lillie Streagle, Disputanta, Va., sister of the groom, and Mrs. James Lewis, Miss Bernice Kene and Miss Jeannette Bloodsworth, of Cambridge, were bridesmaids. Their flowers were pink roses, and their frocks of blue moire. Patricia Maguire, little niece of the bride, was the flower girl.

Calvin Jenkins, of White Stone, Va., was the best man, and the ushers were Ernest Bell, Baltimore, and William Engle, J. Allen Meekins and Thomas H. Maguire, jr., brother of the bride, all of Cambridge.

The nuptial music was played by Robert Harding, organist of Grace Church, and Mrs. Eugene O'Dell, of Baltimore, was the soloist.

Mrs. Streagle, who is a daughter of Mrs. Thomas Maguire and the Mr. Maguire, was graduated at Cambridge-Maryland Training school for Nurses. Later she did postgraduate wokr at Manhattan Hospital, New York City

C. W. Nicholsons Return to Capital After Two Years

Mr. and Mrs. C. Warren Nicholson, after an absence of two years from Washington, have taken a house at 6110 Seventh street. Mrs. Nicholson, it will be recalled, is the former Miss Mary Jones Davis, daughter of the former Mayor of Dallas, Tex., and niece of the late Senator Huey Long.

The Nicholsons, while away from Washington, have made their home in San Antonio, Tex., and more recently spent three months in Hollywood before coming here.

Mrs. Nicholson, whose sister is married to the brother of Frank Buck, jungle explorer, is now working with Mr. Buck on a series of articles to be used in connection with his moving picture assignments.

Society Enjoys Lounge Opening

Mayflower Event Draws Diplomats, Dowagers and Debutantes.

Champaigne and orchids . . . a profusion of yellow chrysanthemums and oak leaves . . . spot lights on "a lilting linguist of song" in a silver brocaded gown with a tight bodice and full skirt . . . diplomats, dowagers and debutantes, scores of other Capital celebrities and a smattering of out-of-towners enjoying the show and the music, Sidney's orchestra—that was the season's formal opening of the Mayflower lounge last evening.

From 10 until 2 o'clock a spirit of gaiety and informality made the opening one of the most successful ever staged at the Mayflower. By midnight the guests who had come to sip and snack, and make a merry evening of it, seemed to be having the time of their lives. There was, also, the top-flight "society dance team" of Pierce and Boland to heighten the color and rhythm of a program that pleased from first to last.

To right and left and all over the room, were faces familiar to the social and official scene. The Ambassador of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, was host to a party including the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza; the head of the Ecuadorean Boundary Commission, Dr. Homero Vitteri and Senora Vitteri, Representative Matthew Merritt, Miss Maxine Smith and G. Butler Sherwell.

The Naval Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Sueyro had at their table Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lewis, and close by, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Cammack had a party including Mr. and Mrs. James Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Abner Drury, Mr. and Mrs. Newton Brewer, Miss Helen Newman and M. F. May. Mrs. Alice Smoot entertained a party of four at her table, and Mr. and Mrs. John A. Remon had with them their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Wenzel, Harold Long and W. J. Manus. Miss Margaret Sampson, deb of this year, was at a table with Miss Ruth Cook, Miss Ann Graham, Mrs. Neitah King, John Chappelear, Jack Davis and James Wimsatt.

Arrives Here With Son From China

Underwood & Underwood.

Mrs. Joseph Charles Burger and her small son, Joseph Charles Burger, jr., who recently arrived from Peiping, China, where Capt. Burger is a member of the American Embassy Marine Guard. Mrs. Burger is now the guest of her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Burger, at their home in Arlington, Va. Capt. Burger, whose tour of duty in China expires shortly, will rejoin his wife and son before December first, and they will then leave for Quantico, his next post.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE COCKTAIL SEASON—with its Martinis, ripe olives, caviar and small talk—is with us again. The party between 5 and 7 is as much a part of our fair city as the Washington Monument, and nowhere else in the world are such affairs as numerous as they are in the Capital.

Yesterday a very congenial one was given by Air Commodore T. E. B. Howe for his successor at the British Embassy, Group Capt. G. C. Pirie, and Mrs. Pirie. Mr. Howe (his title of air commodore is much too long), is leaving us next month to return to England, where he will be in charge of a flying fleet in the north. Group Capt. Pirie comes direct from the air ministry at London, and with Mrs. Pirie and their children, are already established in the Capital.

DUDLEY HARMON.

YESTERDAY'S TEA, which was held in the Chinese room of the Mayflower, was mostly British and Navy, with a scattering of other diplomats and just plain residents for good measure. As a stringed orchestra played liltingly in the background, the guests—many of whom had just returned to the Capital from vacations—checked up on one another's summer and exchanged greetings with friends not seen for several months.

Among the first arrivals was Lady Lindsay, in a simple black frock with matching hat, accompanied by Miss Irene Boyle, who wore a beaver cape over her black outfit. Others from the diplomatic set included Witold Wankowicz, Counselor of the Polish Embassy; the Canadian Minister and Lady Marler, and Miss Willa Magee, who lives with them; Jonkheer van Haersma de With, the Netherlands Minister—Mme. de With will not return until November or December; Michael Vyvyan, of the British Embassy, and Tony Balasy, Counselor of the Hungarian Legation.

• • • •

MAJ. AND MRS. HEYWOOD, of the British Embassy, were busy introducing their friends, Mr. and Mrs. William Lacey, who have recently returned to Washington from Denver. Among the young ladies who assisted the host during the afternoon were Christine Gawne and Helen and Nancy Brereton, Navy juniors. Capt. and Mrs. Lamar Leahy and Mrs. Wallace Lind were others from the Navy set present.

To describe the clothes would be monotonous, as with only a few exceptions every woman present wore black with variations. Mme. Lombard, of the French Embassy, wore a silver fox collar on her black coat, and Mrs. Herbert Feis' frock of this shade was trimmed in white.

• • • •

MEMBERS OF THE German Embassy staff will celebrate Eintops Day patriotically tomorrow with a one-dish meal at the German Ambassador's new house on Massachusetts avenue. In Germany, come October, the first Sunday of every month is set aside for this purpose, and people lunch or dine on only one dish, donating the money thus saved from their usual menu to relief funds.

Tomorrow's Spartan repast will no doubt consist of a thick soup with sausages, a heavy stew, or or something equally nourishing, and perhaps will be topped off with an apple for each.

PERHAPS INSPIRED by an immortal sign which once hung in a Washington department store, "Evey home should have a book," a committee has been organized to supply the Executive Mansion with no less than 200 volumes. President Roosevelt will accept the gift, known as the White House Library, in behalf of the Nation early in November.

Among members of the committee, which includes eight librarians and booksellers, are our own Ruth Bryan Owen and Emily Newell Blair, who have both written books themselves. Others to whom choice of the future library will be entrusted are Fannie Hurst, Gertrude B. Lane, J. Donald Adams and Irita Van Doren.

Miss Mabel Boardman, who rarely attends Capital parties, was among the guests yesterday.

Will Be Married Today

MISS MARY ELIZABETH BATES,

daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Bates, of Scarsdale, N. Y., and formerly of Washington, will be married this afternoon to Russell Whitney Nichols, son of Mrs. Walter W. Nichols and the late Mr. Nichols, of Washington, formerly of Melrose, Mass., in the Unitarian Church of Winchester, Mass. Her matron of honor will be Mrs. Alden Briggs, of Providence, R. I., and Mr. Nichols' best man will be Donald Chase McKie, of Woburn, Mass. After November 1 the couple will be at home at 8301 Sixteenth street, Silver Spring, Md.

Fred D. Faggs To Visit Miami

Fred D. Fagg, jr., director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, who has just been appointed dean of the School of Commerce at Northwestern University, has no idea just when he and Mrs. Fagg and their family will be leaving Washington. Their plans are so indefinite that they have not even thought about making arrangements for moving.

During the first week in December, however, they will take a short jaunt down to Florida, where they will attend the big air races in Miami. Then they will be back in Washington again—maybe until next summer.

Mr. Fagg's desk was so piled with work this past summer that he and Mrs. Fagg spent their entire time in town during the warmish weather.

Dr. Reqhena, Family Stopping in Capital.

Dr. Rafael Requena, noted Venezuelan archeologist, accompanied by Senora de Requena and their two charming daughters, is spending a few months in Washington. They are stopping at the Hay-Adams.

Dr. Requena is arranging to exhibit his fine collection of textiles from Peru and also his archaic findings from Ecuador and Venezuela, which may prove that South America was not always an isolated continent.

Mehrtens Start Wedding Trip

Correspondent Is Married to Miss Lock at the Foundry Church.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Mehrtens, who are now on their wedding trip, and who, on their return to Washington, will make their home at the Sedgwick Apartments, were married yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church, with the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris officiating.

Gaily Dressed Society Throng Attends Warrenton Horse Show

Marsyl Stokes and Martha Talley Among Spectators; Mrs. Melville Church and 'Liz' Whitney Carry Off Honors; Extensive Entertaining.

By Gene Reed.

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 8.—The opening day of the Warrenton Horse Show attracted, as always, a crowd of sporting people. As a backdrop for new fall outfits, Warrenton is perfect, and so many active women seemed to realize it was difficult to keep one's mind on the horses. Mrs. Melville Church, just back from her honeymoon, won the women's appointment class on side saddle, with "Liz" Whitney placing second, both magnificently turned out.

Miss Marsyl Stokes, who is making her debut this winter in Washington, was an attentive spectator. She looked lovely with peasant handkerchief tied over her curls. Miss Martha Talley wore blue with a bright yellow suede hat with such a feather. Miss Louise Chase Myers was another participator, and in riding clothes, as was Mrs. Kenneth Jenkins. Miss Celeste Crosby Miller wore gray with a brilliant scarf. Mrs. George Sloan, in brilliant plaid, spent the greater part of the day in her box.

One of the largest of this day's luncheons was given by Mrs. Baldwin Spillman at her home outside Warrenton. Among guests were the Sterling Larrabees, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Hagner and Ian Montgomery with his sister, Dorothy, who is master of the Casanova Hunt. Mr. and Mrs. Winmill added a dash of old England by arriving in a tander cart.

Boxes Deserted During Show

There was a distinct chill to the air and most of the boxes were deserted while their occupants hung over the rails in the sun. Mrs. William Laird Dunlop 3d arrived late from Washington and joined Mr. and Mrs. William A. Phillips, of Middleburg, and Bill Easton, Mrs. Phillips' brother. Mrs. Reed Thomas wore green tweed with a hat of many colors. Miss Margaret Cotter was looking on with Betty Couzens.

Following the show, the judges and exhibitors were entertained at a cocktail party at the home of Mrs. Victor Froment and her son, North Fletcher, who has as his house guest Miss Wilhelmina Kirby, of Bedford Hills, N. Y., and at night several small dinners were given—one by Miss Dorothy Neyhart, one by Mrs. Adeline Serre and another by Mr. and Mrs. John R. Hinckley. Mrs. Page Biddle entertained very informally at dinner for her house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Almet Jenks, of Southern Pines. The other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Charrington and Richard Wallach.

Visitors Stopping At Warren Green Hotel

Among those staying at the Warren Green for the festivities are Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Reuben, of Hasty Pudding Farm, Toledo, Ohio; M. S. Clark, of Orange, Va., with a party of friends; Mr. and Mrs. Sylvanus Stokes and their daughter, Marsyl, of Annapolis; Mr. and Mrs. J. Bently Squire, jr., of New York; Mrs. Couzens Chewning, Miss Betty Couzens and Miss Margaret Cotter, of Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. P. Kenneth Ellis, of Hot Springs, Va., and several guests.

Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller entertained a house party of friends at View Tree after the Horse show. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Smith had as guests Miss Marian Alexander and Mr. Rodney Kenner, for whom they entertained informally this evening, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Strang, of Vineland, N. J., were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Brooke Parkinson.

Robert C. Winmill brought with him Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Miller, of Scarsdale, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Scott Nesbitt, formerly of Warrenton, now of Covington, Va., stayed with Mrs. Harrison Nesbit, and young Patricia Downes, a student at St. Margaret's School at Tappahannock, Va., spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Constance Downes.

Mr. Broadmead Returns.

Phillip Broadmead, First Secretary of the British Embassy, has returned to Washington after a vacation of several weeks in England.

Perrys Mark Wedding Date

Bridal Party Entertained at Dinner on First Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Colvin Perry celebrated their first wedding anniversary last night with a dinner at the Shoreham. Guests included Mrs. Perry's mother, Mrs. Ross Frederick Wicks, of Newark, N. J., and also the members of their bridal party—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Kline, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Gerald P. Flood, Miss Margaret Finkenstaedt and Murray Kiess.

Following the dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Perry entertained the guests at their apartment at the Dodge Hotel, where they showed movies of their trip to London and Paris, as well as their recent trip abroad. At the close of the evening, the bridegroom's cake was served.

• • • •

Miss Evelyn T. Marquette had as her house guest recently Miss Ruth Macphail, of New York City and Montreal, Canada. The time was spent at Miss Marquette's summer cottage, rural Felicity, on West River in Maryland.

On Sunday Miss Marquette entertained at an informal dinner. Among her guests were Miss Helen Finegan, of Washington; the Rev. H. K. Wilson, of Annapolis, and the Rev. Mr. Prendergast, of Severna Park, Md.

League of Women Voters Committee Heads Outline Work, Members Join Study Groups

Mrs. Ottenberg Sketches Organization's Purpose.

150 Attend Luncheon at Y. W., Hear Informal Discussion.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

New members of the Voteless District League of Women Voters, looking for constructive work to do in community affairs, found plenty outlined for them yesterday at the league's opening luncheon at the Y. W. C. A. Pursuant of the league's purpose, as stated by the new president, Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, "to promote, through education, responsible participation of women in government," the local organization has announced committees and study groups in several fields which members may join.

As a proof of effectiveness of the league's program of study, Mrs. Ottenberg pointed out that several members had been called upon to fill positions of importance in the city. Among them are Mrs. William Kittle, past president, who is now chairman of the Minimum Wage Board; Mrs. Charles Weston, who is a member of the Citizens' Reorganization Committee, and Mrs. Harry Lee Parkinson, who was called on as an expert on taxation.

Yesterday's program was presented following Mrs. Ottenberg's brief greeting and her introduction of committee chairmen—Mrs. Eugene Duffield, chairman of finance; Mrs. Albert H. Putney, of publicity; Mrs. Joseph McKenzie, of membership; Mrs. J. C. McCaskill, of college student membership; Mrs. Wendell Lund, of arrangements; Mrs. Ralph Smith, hospitality; Mrs. C. S. Duncan, Bulletin editor, and Mrs. Paul T. David, chairman of legislation.

Mrs. Samuel Horne, former editor of the League Bulletin, had arranged, in co-operation with department chairmen, an informal program by which they presented their plan of work for the year in response to questions asked by new members. Mrs. Hugh Butler introduced the new chairmen and led the discussion. The theme emphasized throughout was the league's effort to assemble accurate information on all questions in which it is interested before taking a stand, and then approaching the solution through the channels of legislation and government.

Mrs. Lorenz States League's Peace Stand

Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, chairman of government and foreign policy, stated the league favors building a collective peace system among the nations.

"This requires patient planning, honesty of purpose and complete information," she said. "It requires popular support. An informed public is essential. We hope to organize study groups throughout the city as part of a movement to this end.

"Our State Department is our department of peace," said Mrs. Lorenz. "While you are cheering the men in uniform, reserve a cheer for that small body of men who are trying to keep us out of war."

Mrs. William H. Savin, chairman of government and education, announced the opening of study groups in her department October 19 at the A. A. U. W. The league will interest itself in the occupational and vocational courses being offered in the schools here as well as in the problems presented by the cutting of the school budget—there will be a place for those with a flair for figures on this committee, said the chairman.

Other D. C. Needs To Be Studied

Mrs. Gordon Wagenet, chairman of government and child welfare, called attention to the high infant and mortality rate in the District as one of the phases of the child-welfare problem which would be studied by her group.

Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, chairman of government and economic welfare, pointed out the need of having the complete picture of the unemployment and relief situation before it could be intelligently met. There are many different agencies, but so far the situation as a whole has not been surveyed, and this is the work her committee plans to undertake—another where statisticians will be welcome, she said.

Government and the legal status of women is under the chairmanship of Mrs. Pearl B. Klein, who outlined for her committee a study of conditions in penal institutions for women in the District.

Mrs. Charles Weston, chairman of government and its operation, brought up one of the subjects dearest to the hearts of taxpayers in the District of Columbia, the matter of a vote for its residents, 40 per cent of whom have no other voting place. She quoted the generous offer of the Baltimore Public Schools Association to do what it could through Maryland Congressmen to aid the District with its school problems, but pointed out that the District should be in a position to act for itself.

Members of the league, nearly 150 of whom were present at the opening luncheon yesterday, signed up for the various study groups. Hostesses were Mrs. Walter Ufford, Mrs. Thomas Easterling, Mrs. Ruth Hopper, Mrs. William Leiserson, Mrs. Louis Cohn, Mrs. J. N. Saunders and Mrs. Harold Krogh.

THE ARTS CLUB is living up to its reputation for doing things in an artistic and colorful style in advertising its Potboilers Fair and Glorified Junk Sale, October 14, 15 and 16. The gayest kind of announcements are being distributed, with mice, parrots, white elephants and black cats cavorting all over them. One illustration even shows the fire alarm in action, with the explanation that proceeds of the fair will pay for the new balcony and the fire alarm system in the clubhouse.

Mrs. Edwin H. Etz is chairman of the white elephant booth, assisted by Mrs. John B. Hutson, Mrs. Carroll Meigs, Miss Mary Linter, Mrs. LaSalle Spier, Miss Helen Verbrycke, Miss Myrta Williams and Mrs. Robert B. Youmans.

Oberlin Alumni Give Party Here

Centennial of Women's Entrance Into Colleges Is Observed.

Members of the Oberlin College Alumni of Washington gathered last night for a dinner in the cafeteria room of the Raleigh Hotel to celebrate the centennial of the entrance of women to education of college level, in which Oberlin took the lead. As the college is also one which admits colored students with those of other races, several of the colored alumni had part in the program.

Mrs. T. E. Whiting, who for six years was secretary to Ernest Hatch Wilkins, president of Oberlin, presided, and brief talks were made by Miss Maud Morlock, of the class of 1911, on "The Place of College Women in Professional Life," and by Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, one of the colored women in the class of 1884, on "What College Education Has Done for Colored Women." Miss Morlock, formerly professor in the School of Applied Science at Western Reserve University, is now with the Children's Bureau as economic analyst. Mrs. Terrell is one of the prominent members of her race in Washington and for 11 years served as a member of the Board of Education. Camille Nickerson, pianist and a member of the faculty of Howard University, assisted by Mrs. J. C. Webster, soprano, presented the musical program.

Among the 75 guests were Dr. and Mrs. E. Dana Durand, Judge and Mrs. Ernest Van Fossan, Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Metcalf, both of the class of '85; Miss Mabel Law, Miss Francella McWilliams, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick F. Blachly, of Brookings Institution; Miss Edith Gray, of the Children's Bureau; Miss Margaret Hays, Lowell Kilgore, Mrs. Arthur Hummel, Dr. Isabella V. Kendig, Mrs. George Arner, Mr. and Mrs. Harold N. Fowler, Col. Claude H. Birdseye, Mr. and Mrs. Roland S. Dyer, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Gott, Mr. Whiting, Donald H. Wheeler, son of the late Wayne B. Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler. Mrs. Elwood Street is one of the Oberlin alumni attending the ceremonies there.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 8.

ALICE HUGHES.

OUR BACKWARD hillbilly community has just passed another feminine milestone on two wheels and, with yowling brakes. Our first jury with women members to hear a divorce case has just listened to the evidence with big ears and a few lady-like blushes and has brought in its verdict. The whole thing is a mild New York comedy, somehow. See if you don't agree.

As you may know, divorces in this State are won only the hard way. Collusion, I regret to fear, is as common as lip-rouge on "the other woman." And our first lady jurors, or juroresses, sat in a divorce trial! They weren't prepared, I learned, for the necessary frankness of the testimony, but they seen their duty and they done it. They decided that our Mrs. Mae Jackson had been unfaithful to her ever-loving spouse, our Mr. Frank Jackson, and gave the gent his freedom. But the girls in the jury-box did have a few qualms. Sissies, maybe.

I spoke to the forelady of this historic New York jury. Her name was Mrs. Julia E. Ehrentreu, by trade a housewife. If the embattled wife, Mrs. E. said, had brought in a few character witnesses, she might have fared better. "We had nothing to go by," said Mrs. E. "She should have had some nice people come in and testify for her. She was a sweet little thing." Get the sympathetic note for a sister on the hot spot? And especially, I call your attention to the truly stupendous naivete of this first jury forewoman, whose name may be in the history books! Character witnesses, indeed, in an Empire State divorce case!

Well, there it is. A short but not unimportant page for the book. I'm afraid our ladies will have to unlearn blushing. Heaven forbid!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—No, don't phone me today. I'm not home. I'm up at West Point, that glorious spot on the Lordly Hudson, where our tough but tiny Columbia squad is doing its best with the Kaydets' football team. Last year we were doing fine with the apprentice generals until that little skinny dynamo, "Monkey" Meyer, began throwing passes all over the ether. Then we folded. But he's out now, and we may do all right . . .

Got your plaid clothes for these Saturdays? I see so many around this burg, and especially at pigskin struggles, that I'm surprised the college bands this year don't throw away their cornets and trombones and learn the bag-pipes exclusively . . . Our teams in the East play good football. But I still say that the brand uncorked in the Middle West by the big State University teams is about the greatest football in America. Boy, have I seen some games—far west of the Hudson River . . .

We are awaiting the end of a great sentimental journey. On November 28 the ace pianist, Josef Hoffmann, will play his golden jubilee concert in America—50 years of glorious key pounding. And in a front-row seat will be his 84-year-old mother, Mathilde Hoffmann, come all the way from the Fatherland to be present! It is her first visit since she brought Joe to us, a prodigy of 10, and what a prodigy! American music maniacs went mad over the wunderkind . . .

I don't know if it's a costume or a Christmas tree, but Diana Vreeland, colorful girl on Harper's Bazaar, wears it. Listen. A red monkey jacket over a black dress. Hung with tinkling red, gold and green metal and glass doo-dads. Plus a triple string of pearls. Nice Diana gets plenty attention. And why in heck not?

The Black Basic Dress Appears in Three Important Roles

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

WHETHER you call it the fundamental, the multiple, the double-duty, or five-day-a-week, the old idea of the "basic" dress has appeared on the fashion scene again, and is the backbone of many a business woman's wardrobe. It is not only thrifty but smart, in these modern times, to buy one ultra-smart black dress of good lines and material and with various accessory changes, allow it to serve for numerous occasions. Such a dress may be either sheer wool or any of the novelty or conventional silk crepes that are available this season.

The basic dress should be planned with simple lines in order to furnish the proper background for the accent changes. Above all, the neckline must be sufficiently high, and the waistline without benefit of complications, or the different touches at the throat and belt will look patchy instead of chic. Designers this fall have played right into the hands of the business woman who must budget her income and buy her clothes with judgment and discrimination. There never has been so many really smart ideas to convert one frock into at least a dozen by the addition of well-chosen accessories.

A simple black dress devoid of trimming can take on an entirely different appearance by substituting a hat and gloves of bright color for the usual black; for instance, soft green, wine, medium deep blue, bright red, or cinnamon brown. A dress which looks dignified and formal in character can quickly change its theme into something youthful and business-like by adding white collars and cuffs. For cocktails or informal dinner, the simple dress becomes dramatic when twin scarfs of bright stripes or pattern are tied about the throat and waistline. The same idea is affected with one of the lame halter vestees which tie around the waist.

Costume jewelry, which is back in vogue with a vengeance, can do wonders to give an otherwise simple dress that look of opulence and elegance; particularly, the massive looking versions of gold or silver-colored metal. The same is true of veils—adding a long, swishy veil to even a tailored dress, dramatizes the entire ensemble. This accessory abracadabra can also work magic in giving a black dress a sportive air, by topping it with a checked woolen jacket, and choosing gloves, hat and shoes in the same classification. It becomes an interesting, as well as profitable, game to see just how many costumes can be developed, using the basic dress as the background for the experimenting. The possibilities this season, in this regard, are literally endless; and they can be smart if well planned.

The basic dress in black semisheer silk crepe is a "must" in the well-planned fall and winter wardrobe. Above, it is shown with gold metalized silk pastron.

The same dress, with lingerie collar and cuffs of white pique, and belt of self-material with novelty buckle. An ideal arrangement for business, school, traveling.

Varied accents may change the appearance of a basic dress and create the illusion of an extensive wardrobe.

A third accessory change and very effective for cocktails or informal dinner. This time, twin scarfs of striped velvet are tied about the throat and waistline. Note the massive-looking bracelet.

Woolly Lamb Gets Place in Evening Mode This Winter

Paris (U.P.).—Woolly lambs will make their bow in society this winter making no apologies to the minks, ermine and silver fox they will meet in exclusive entertainment centers, for Paris designers have made them into some of the most intriguing of afternoon and evening wraps.

Vera Borea uses a creamy lambskin for a full-length evening coat of classic design. Nipped in at the waist, the wrap is made with high revers and no collar. The sleeves stop at the elbow and the skirt is designed with a graceful flare to the floor.

A white lambskin jacket with woolly round sleeves is bound with deep blue velvet to match a skirt in Chanel's collection and she also uses the soft white fur for a daytime coat with black vest and matching white hat.

There is a feeling of cozy warmth in the thick white fur which blends with the season's spirit of luxury, but some of the designers tint it a rich shade to blend with colors of an ensemble. Schiaparelli tints lambskin in her new "sultry rose" hue to line a black open coat, and Madeleine de Rauch dyes it to blend with costumes in her collection.

Paquin makes wooly lambskin swagger coats and Jenny chooses a golden Argentine lamb for one of her most successful daytime coats. One house shows a handsome evening coat of brown dyed lambskin, sleeveless and straight-lined.

Understanding About Finance on Part of Engaged Couples Is Good Form.

By Margaret Wallace

THE ETIQUETTE of engagements is a puzzling problem to many young persons, judging from the number of letters received dealing with this matter. Chief among these problems from the future bride's point of view is that of allowance and family finance.

Yesterday I received this appeal from an engaged girl:

"DEAR MISS WALLACE: I am engaged to the dearest man in the world. He is so kind, thoughtful and considerate in every way that I look forward to a long life of happiness with him.

"There is only one cloud in our skies, and that is financial. Although we have discussed practically everything else concerning our future life together he has never said a single word about money—what his present income is—how much he will expect me to spend for the household, or whether I am to have a personal allowance and how much it is to be.

"I have tried to bring up the subject several times and each time he has told me that we must not think of the material side of marriage just now. 'After marriage, we will fix all that,' he told me recently.

"In our family there has been several experiences of marriages going on the rocks because of money troubles of this nature. I want to be assured that ours will not be harmed that way and I think it is better to talk it out before than after marriage. What is the proper method to approach this subject? Is it brought up by many engaged girls, and is there anything improper about my pressing it?

"ANXIOUS BRIDE-ELECT."

Certainly, dear Bride-Elect, there is nothing improper from the standpoint of manners in your talking over your future financial status with your fiance. In olden times such a discussion might have been considered "indelicate," but there is a sturdier and franker point of view about marriage nowadays which permits adult men and women to talk over the possibilities and probabilities of their lives in a way that prevents much after unhappiness.

Advises Firmness.

John G. Saxe, the poet, once wrote a stanza on this question which tells in a few words the essentials of it. He wrote:

"I asked of Echo t'other day
(Whose words are few and often funny)
What to a novice she could say
Of courtship, love and matrimony.
Quoth Echo, plainly, 'Matter-o'-money.'"

Therefore, to avoid a discussion on this vital point is as foolish as not to discuss where or when the wedding is to be or who is to perform it.

Be very firm with your fiance. Say to him something like this:

"My dear, we must discuss our future financial status together, because I want to avoid any matrimonial rocks possible, and we must have a complete understanding in this matter before we are wed."

You will find that if you speak thus frankly he will respond in kind. It may be a relief to him to have you speak out frankly about it.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Hard Water Not Harmful.

Is hard water harmful?

This question troubles some part of the population from time to time, and faddists seize on it to sound the alarm.

Hard water is water with calcium salts in it. Water softeners simply take calcium out of such water, usually by means of the chemical, potassium-sodium-aluminum silicate—often called "green sand."

The body contains about 1 per cent of calcium, or nearly 1½ pounds, and as it is constantly being lost, it must be replaced. Especially is this true during periods of growth, and for the mother who is bearing a child. The daily requirements for the unborn child at four months is 150 milligrams of calcium: a quart of milk contains this and more.

Nutritional experts tell us that calcium is more likely to be deficient in the average American dietary than any other important element.

If that is true, hard water should be beneficial rather than harmful.

The belief that such is the case is strengthened by the reports of Meyer of Vienna (published in 1920), who examined young men from different parts of Europe as to their relative fitness for military duty, considered on the basis of the quality of the water supply at their homes. He found that the best teeth were in those who came from areas where harder potable waters were used. He also showed that the population of Gotha showed evidences of "deterioration" after they were compelled to change the supply of drinking water from one of hard quality to a softer kind.

While we may take the latter with a little justifiable skepticism, the indication certainly is against supposing that hard waters are harmful.

The fear usually stated is that it contributes to hardening of the arteries and to chronic rheumatism. Undoubtedly calcium is deposited in the arteries in old age, and is the ingredient in the nodules around the joints of rheumatism, but there is no evidence to show that these processes are accelerated when the amount of calcium in the water is increased.

Many physicians are of the opinion that after chronic rheumatism has started, the use of hard water for drinking purposes should be stopped. This is a matter of discussion, and it must be admitted there is some justification for such a view. The cause of the deposit in chronic rheumatism is the laying down of calcium in and around spots of inflammation in the joints. The calcium will not be laid down under conditions of health, no matter how much is in the blood. But after the inflammation has started, the presence of excess calcium in the drinking water may reasonably be thought to lead to excessive calcium deposits in the bone.

We may conclude, however, that hard water is not harmful for drinking purposes in health.

Four-Piece Adaptability.

New York (AP).—Four-piece outfits, ready for town or country, are displayed by a number of designers this season. They combine a shadow-plaid wool reefer coat with a plain wool suit which has a second shadow checked skirt to match the coat. The checked skirt can be worn with sports sweaters.

Amethyst Caracul.

Rosalind Russell, movie actress, has launched another fashion idea which is destined to become very popular. Through her furrier she had an amethyst Russian caracul coat made in the latest and smartest fashion.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Three Hints Are Offered for Reduction of Waistline.

By Ida Jean Kain.

YOU KNOW THAT waistlines are getting smaller, but did you know that the average woman has taken 4 inches off her waistline in the last decade?

This is, approximately, the change in waistlines brought about by streamlining the figure, according to no less an authority than Lucien Lelong, Parisian designer for the smart women of the world.

Waistline slimness is only a part of the improvement in the feminine figure. There is a molded line of the bust and hips, and a flat diaphragm which gives the figure a more youthful appearance. The average woman looks younger today than ever before, declare Mr. Lelong, who goes so far as to say that there are no middle-aged figures!

The vanishing of the middle-aged figure is to be attributed to an active interest in sports, intelligent diet and, yes, calisthenics. The sports-built figure is not only healthier; it is far more beautiful.

The designers are doing everything possible this year to emphasize slimness. If you are not slim, they help you to look so anyway. When I asked Mr. Lelong if any designer ever really considered the overweight woman, he replied, "The modes are very elastic this year, and the 'stylish stout' at last has her innings."

With a little co-operation on your part, you can give the appearance of streamlines. All you have to do is take a couple of inches off your waistline with exercise, buy one of the new girdles with midriff control, and let the couturiers do the rest.

Design for slimming.

Here is a trio of exercises that will banish inches from the waistline and strengthen the tummy muscles to give you svelte lines:

Try this stretch, bend and twist!

POSITION: Feet apart, stretching both arms high in air.

Here's a good flattening exercise:

POSITION: Lying flat on back, arms overhead on floor and body stretched to full extension.

MOVEMENT: Keeping the feet on the floor, sit up until the body forms a right angle, arms still stretched high overhead. Try to come up without moving the arms ahead of the body. Pull upward, then slowly return to position and relax. Repeat six times.

Here is an old standby that must be included in the trio, since it is best ever for slimming the front lines:

POSITION: Lying on back on floor, hands clasped under the head, and with feet elevated on object slightly higher than chair seat.

MOVEMENT: Raise the buttocks off the floor until the body is in an oblique line, weight resting on shoulders and heels. Repeat six, later twelve, times.

Designers This Year Are Placing Emphasis on Slimness.

Dash of Wine Adds Special Flavor to Home Recipe.

By Nancy Ellis.

FALL DAYS are here again, bright, crisp days with cooler evenings. The problem of entertaining guests at home once more presents itself. What could be more inviting than a crowd of guests, young and old, gathered in front of a cozy fireplace and served a delightfully informal meal?

Such a party is certainly the answer for the woman who wishes to attend the football game and arrive home fresh and unruffled to play hostess for her arriving guests. Meals that may be prepared in advance and can be reheated are adapted to occasions like this.

Baked Beans Popular.

One dish carefully selected can form the piece de resistance for the meal. Baked beans are popular for such suppers. There are numerous ways to prepare them. The prepared beans, that need only to be reheated, can be used. For these, a special flavor can be added such as that of sherry wine. The sherry adds that indescribable something to the flavor of the finished product that makes the dish outstanding.

Wine can also be used in the preparation of the old-fashioned home-baked beans. In preparing this dish, add the wine when the beans are about half-cooked. You will find that this trick deserves a special place in your memory of savory adventures.

Serve the beans from the new special bean pot that can be purchased in almost every department store. New England brown bread and corn sticks are the ideal accompaniments. A tart salad, coffee, and deep dish apple pie with poured cream would make the meal satisfying.

Raw Ham Advised.

In preparing the home-baked beans, follow your favorite recipe and add the wine during the last half of the baking period. Add about 1 cup of domestic sherry wine for each pound of beans used. Unless you are particularly fond of salt pork or bacon with the baked beans, try them prepared with small pieces of raw smoked ham added to the beans in the beginning of the baking period. This is especially good when the wine is used.

Here is an old-fashioned recipe for the corn sticks that you will like. Instead of the buttermilk, thick sour milk can be substituted.

Corn Sticks.

2 cups of white cornmeal
¼ cup of melted butter or shortening
1 teaspoon of salt
½ teaspoon of soda
2 eggs
2 cups of thick buttermilk

Sift the cornmeal, salt, and soda together. Add the unbeaten eggs to the milk. Add the sifted dry ingredients and beat well. Place a teaspoon of butter in each of the iron compartments of the corn stick pans. Place in the oven and allow to become hot. Add the corn batter and fill the pans not more than half full. Bake in oven set at 425 degrees for 20 minutes.

This buffet supper served after the football game features home-baked beans with sherry served from an old-fashioned bean pot. Slices of canned brown bread and home-made corn sticks make a perfect accompaniment.

October Markets Offer Wide Choice

October markets are still offering a wide choice of vegetables and fruits. Peaches, pears and plums flank apples and grapes at the markets. Pineapple and melons rest beside crabapples, cranberries and quinces. There are also figs, oranges, grapefruit and bananas.

If you have acquired a taste for avacadoes, you will find them still plentiful and cheap. Tomatoes are reasonable. Lettuce is of excellent quality.

Eggs are unusually plentiful for this time of year. Spanish omelets and cheese omelets make delicious breakfast and luncheon dishes.

Lamb is the best this week. The price has dropped since last week. Fresh pork loins are also cheaper. Veal remains about the same. Ducklings and turkeys offer good values this week. Frying chickens are moderate in price.

Best Apple Recipe To Receive Award In Post's Contest

Join the "Big Apple" contest this week! It takes a favorite recipe to win. The news that comes from Winchester is good news. There will be a bumper crop this fall. Large, well-flavored, home-grown apples will be on the market in abundnace and it is not too soon to get recipes on hand for immediate use.

There are dozens of ways to win. Old-fashioned apple dumplings, deep-dish pies, salads, apple fritters, kuchen—these are a few suggestions that may bring to mind a family recipe that is a winner. Minted apple rings and spiced sauces are other ways to use this fruit. The only limitation is that it be a delicious recipe that is not too expensive to prepare.

Look through your files, select your favorite apple dish and mail it to Jean Green, Post Food Editor, before Saturday, October 16.

Kitchenette Dinner Recipe Suggested

Little Pig Sausage and Peaches Featured.

Little pig sausage and broiled peach halves make an excellent flavor combination for a kitchenette dinner. The little sausages should be pricked with the tines of a fork before placing on the broiler rack. This will prevent them from splitting in cooking.

While the oven is hot, a pan of muffins or biscuits can be quickly whipped together.

Sausage Grill.

1 pound of sausages
6 peach halves
2 tablespoons of butter
2 lemons
Parsley.

Prick sausage casings. Place on the broiler rack with the fresh peach halves, cup side up. Put a half teaspoon of butter in the center of each peach cavity. Set the broiler rack 4 inches under a moderately high broiler flame. Broil the meat and fruit about 10-12 minutes. Turn the sausages once to obtain an even brown. Remove the peaches when the edges brown. Serve the sausages in the center of the platter, surrounded by the peach halves. Garnish with parsley.

New Muffin Flavor.

Try dropping a teaspoonful of peanut butter into each compartment of your muffin tin before pouring in the batter. This gives the muffins a delicious nutty flavor.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How to Make 'Life Go On' After You've Lost the One You Love, Asks Heartsick College Girl.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I've heard that life goes on after you lose the person you love, but I must be different from other people. I'm a girl of 21, returning to college this year so sick at heart that I can't bear the idea of lessons, classes, exams, etc., and week-ends spent twiddling my thumbs and pining for my lost love. What in the world can I do? I've tried everything I can think of, nothing works and I am in despair.

* * * *

For two years I went with a young man of 24. Although I actually admire but few of his qualities I know I love him more than life itself. I am quite positive he loved me as much at one time, but due to various circumstances he has changed. A short time ago we were out driving and out of a clear sky he told me he didn't love me any more but considered me a good friend and would do anything for me. He suggested we stop seeing each other and try to forget.

* * * *

Like a perfect fool, I begna to cry. I hated to act like a sissy but I love him so terribly and have had such good times with him that I simply couldn't bear the thought of separation. Finally, however, I regained my composure and we agreed to part and to have no communication of any kind hereafter. So far, we haven't, and I've been perfectly miserable. I cry all the time, can't eat and sleep is impossible. I think of him constantly, wondering where he is and what he's doing, until I think I'll go insane.

* * * *

Honestly, I can't stand it much longer. He is my first love and the two years I spent with him were the happiest in my life. To forget is impossible. . . . Is there anything I can do to make me realize life is still worth living? I'm sure you'll suggest going out with others, but I've tried that and it doesn't work. There are several young men who are very fond of me and one of them would have married me recently had I consented. But when I do go out I'm bored to death. Everyone suffers by comparison with the man I love. My only feeling is a desperate longing to be with him.

* * * *

Is there a chance of winning him back? He told me he was not in love with anyone else, and I had suspected for a long time he was losing interest in me. I think he was just "fed up." He isn't the type who runs around much and until we parted, I usually knew where he was when we were not together. If I can't win him back, can you tell me how I can manage to have him telephone and date me occasionally. I'd be willing—no matter how hard it might be—to see him on a basis of friendship only, just to see him and talk with him once in a while.

* * * *

His stipulation of "no communication whatsoever" was for my benefit, I'm sure. He knows I care for him as much as ever (and this doesn't mean he's conceited; he's modest, fair-minded and sincere), but he can't know this separation is driving me crazy. Since he doesn't love me any more, naturally it is easy for him. Looking back, I have only myself to blame for the way things have turned out. How can I help myself? Perhaps other girls who have lived through the same thing can give me some suggestions. I would certainly appreciate any help they could offer. I'm so unhappy now I long to die. Please let me hear from you at your earliest convenience. Gratefully.

JOAN.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR JOAN: You are wrestling with a mighty emotional problem, I admit, but you can master it if you will—and be a better woman for it. You must take a practical, deliberate approach to the cure of this heartbreak. Two things you must do. One is to bring your physical health up to par. No more going without food, no more sleepless nights. You must eat regularly and nourishingly, if you have to force food down as grimly as you would if the difference between life and death depended upon your eating what the doctor prescribed. And you must sleep 6, 8 or preferably 10 hours a night for a while, until you are living once more on physical energy instead of drawing upon an almost exhausted reserve of nervous energy. This means that you must see a doctor—at once!—tell him the cause of your sleeplessness and loss of appetite, and ask him to prescribe a safe and effective sedative. In addition, he may prescribe other doses for building up your general health. Employ his prescriptions, follow his instructions to the letter.

* * * *

The second thing you must do is assume deliberate, conscious control over your mind. Don't let it run away with you, hour after hour, day after day, down tortuous and torturing paths of memory. That is easier said than done, of course, but resolute, unyielding practice will develop this control sooner than you think. Brooding over what has been and what might have been is simply another way of taking constant doses of mental poison. The result is unnecessary, foolishly aggravated pain, like exploring an aching tooth or an open wound to see if it still hurts.

* * * *

When a bar of music, the tone of a voice, a familiar scene, an oft-spoken word, reminds you of this man, don't just give way weakly to brooding. Concentrate with all your might on anything else at all; plunge into a conversation, or get up and get busy, depending on whether or not you're alone. You must go out with other men and you must stop comparing other men with this man. Just now, your boredom with others is 90 per cent caused by nervous exhaustion. You should arrange to dance a lot; it will be a tonic, as soon as your basic strength returns. You should get out of doors a lot, daytime and evening. A brisk turn before bedtime will do wonders. You should go in for sports (old stuff in the way of advice, perhaps, but there's nothing better for this type of ailment), and you should work to enhance your appearance. Your hair, your skin, your nails, your figure, your wardrobe, should receive meticulous attention. Certain exercises which would do marvelous things toward molding your figure into new lines of grace and beauty would also do remarkable things toward relaxing taut nerves and muscles.

* * * *

Inasmuch as you don't respect this man's qualities, you're not really in love with him. You're physically infatuated with him, and companionship with him had become a lazy, effortless sort of thing. No doubt you "let down," abandoned your reserve with him, which may have been one of the principal reasons why you lost him. You've got to pull yourself together into a better integrated, prouder, surer, more self-contained and self-motivating personality.

* * * *

You need a sustaining philosophy—a phrase which doesn't mean much until one has acquired it. It's difficult to define. It has to do with the spiritual, philosophical or intellectual premise by which one evaluates experience. With some, it may be a serene, on-going, upreaching faith in God; with others, a hardy determination to survive, with courage and hope intact, every blow that Fate may deal, as in Henley's "Invictus"; with others, a cynical chalk-it-up-to-experience, what-will-it-matter-one-hundred-years-from-now sort of attitude; with still others, Emerson's theory of compensation—namely, that for everything taken away, something equivalent or better is given, and with yet others, the theory so beautifully stated in John Burrough's poem, "Waiting," that what is really one's own can never be taken away—that what one reaches for and misses was never intended for, and would not in the last anaylsis have been best, for one.

* * * *

With a return of sound health, steady nerves, regular habits; with the beginnings of some sustaining philosophy which ties you in, so to speak, with the world (in both its larger and its limited sense), in which you live; with an improved appearance and an inflexible determination to find, amongst the many friends you have, adequate social compensation for your lost comradeship with this one man, you can hoist yourself by your very bootstraps out of this Slough of Despair onto higher and happier ground.

* * * *

In my opinion, it would be futile to throw yourself in the young man's path or to solicit kindnesses from him. Follow the program I have outlined above, and if there is any possibility of regaining either his love or his friendship, he will come back to you of his own accord in time.

M. H.

The Making of a Prize Dish

Mrs. Charles Normandy, 221 Vine street northwest, has measured the ingredients for her prize winning dish, "Macaroni Mousse," and is now blending them before baking in the buttered casserole. The dish is inexpensive to prepare.

A Georgian's Macaroni Mousse Is Prize Recipe for This Week

Mrs. Charles Normandy Describes Dish From Quaint Kitchen.

By Jean Green.
The Post Food Editor.

THE FIRST AWARD in our contest this week was won by Mrs. Charles Normandy, 221 Vine street northwest. Her recipe was for macaroni mousse, a nutritious dish that is completely satisfying.

Mrs. Normandy, who no longer does culinary experimentation, has a wealth of recipes that are surrounded by pleasant memories. These are recipes now treasured by her daughters and grandchildren living in the District.

Her kitchen during its 20 years use has gained a charm that I must tell you about. There are gay hooked rugs on the floor, wide old-fashioned china cabinets spotless in white, a sink with tapering oak drain, and framed mirror. The kitchen chairs date back in Georgia history at least 100 years. The kitchen is a friendly place that has a happy welcome for those who enter. There is even an old-fashioned pantry.

Her prize-winning recipe is simply made. She has long found it a favorite with members of her household. Often when in a hurry, Mrs. Normandy increases the oven temperature.

Macaroni Mousse.

1½ cups of scalded milk
¼ cup of melted butter
1 cup of elbow macaroni
1 cup of soft bread crumbs
½ cup of mild cheese chopped fine
3 eggs, well beaten
1 pimiento chopped fine
1 teaspoon of chopped onion
½ teaspoon of salt

Heat milk. Melt the cheese in milk, add other ingredients. Add eggs last. Reserve ½ cup of bread crumbs, butter them. Place other ingredients in casserole. Sprinkle the bread crumbs over the top.

Bake one hour or until firm in dish of hot water in oven set at 350 degrees.

The second prize of $2 was won by Nancy Ludwig, 6607 Eastern avenue, Takoma Park, Md. She writes that the recipe has been a favorite in her family for 20 years of vegetarian diet.

Nut Loaf.

1 cup of ground mixed nuts
1 cup of bread crumbs
1 egg
1 cup of milk or water
1 teaspoon of salt
¼ teaspoon of pepper
½ cup of shredded celery or 1 medium-sized onion minced.

Blend the ingredients. Grease and flour a loaf pan and fill with the mixture. If desired the flavor can be changed by adding tomatoes and a level teaspoon of celery seed. Bake in a slow oven for 30 minutes.

Cheese Croquettes.

1 cup of American cheese
¼ cup of bread crumbs
1 egg sauce
¼ teaspoon of Worcestershire
¼ teaspoon of salt

Beat the yolks of the egg and mix with the bread crumbs. Next add the grated cheese, salt and Worcestershire sauce. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the egg. Shape the mixture into croquettes and roll each one in bread crumbs before frying. Drop into deep fat and fry until delicate brown. This makes six croquettes.

Oriental Rice En Casserole.

3 cups of cooked rice
¼ pound of chopped mushrooms
1½ cups of thin white sauce
1 cup of cheese cut in bits

Grease the baking dish. Put a layer of rice, then a layer of cheese and mushrooms and cover with the white sauce. Repeat until all ingredients are used, saving a layer of cheese and mushrooms for the top. Bake in a hot oven 20 minutes or until brown and crispy on top.

White Sauce.

1 tablespoon of shortening
1 tablespoon of flour
¾ teaspoon of salt
1-16 teaspoon of pepper
1 cup of milk

Melt shortening, add flour, salt and pepper. Stir well, add milk, and bring to a boil. Stir constantly. Keep over hot water until ready to use.

The fifth prize was awarded Mrs. W. B. Loving, 6032 Twentieth street, Arlington, Va. The ready prepared macaroni is made more interesting by baking it in an abundance of well-seasoned sauce.

Macaroni Mardi Gras.

1 can of macaroni in cheese sauce
3 tablespoons of butter
1 tablespoon of prepared mustard
½ teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon of pepper
¾ teaspoon of salt
3 tablespoons of flour
3 cups of milk
4 hard boiled eggs

Melt the butter. Make a paste of the flour and seasonings. Add the milk gradually, cook over low heat until thickened, stirring constantly. Pour the heated macaroni into a greased baking dish. Add the sauce. Cover with sliced eggs topped with a little sauce. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes.

Housewives Economize With Left-Over Foods

Left-over meats represent economy, not waste, these days. The thrifty housewife has learned that it pays to buy a large enough quantity of meat and to cook it at one time for more than one meal. She ha. learned that this is economical from the standpoint of price, fuel, time and energy.

Roasts and pot-roasts, also baked hams and half hams, are chief among the meats which furnish plentiful left-overs. But remember that no remnant of other cuts of meat need be wasted. Any cooked meat, even a small amount, can be diced or minced and combined with other foods to form tasty dishes.

Scones Are Easy To Make at Home

Recipe Given for Delicious Scottish Bread.

Haven't you always wanted to know how to make scones? They are the tea cakes that are as Scotch as heather on the moor.

The cakes are really not hard to make. The trick is to handle the dough quickly. It is so soft that you can pat in out into rounds and cut it into pie-shaped pieces.

Scones are really delicious not only for tea but for breakfast and luncheon. They are good served direct from the griddle, but they may be split, toasted, buttered and served with jam.

Scones.

4 cups of flour
1 teaspoon of soda
2 teaspoons of baking powder
1 cup of sugar
1-3 cup of butter
2 eggs
1 cup of sour cream or 1 cup of evaporated milk and 1 tablespoon of vinegar

Sift the flour, then measure. Resift with the dry ingredients. Add the butter cut into the dry ingredients with two knives. Add the eggs and the sour cream or prepared milk. This makes a very moist dough.

Sprinkle flour on the board and spoon out part of the dough. Knead and roll it out in flour. Pat into shape. Cook slowly on a griddle. Let brown on one side then turn and brown on the other.

China Gratified At Roosevelt's Chicago Speech

But Foreign Minister Wang Says 'Positive Measures' Needed to Halt War.

Gratification for the principles enunciated by President Roosevelt in his Chicago address on foreign policy was expressed by Dr. Wang Chung-hui, Chinese Minister for Foreign Affairs, in a statement received at the Chinese Embassy last night and made public by Ambassador Dr. C. T. Wang.

Of the League Assembly action in denouncing Japan's onslaught on China, the foreign minister said:

"The resolution and the two reports adopted by the Assembly of the League of Nations on the subject of the present Sino-Japanese Conflict, though falling short of the action that China believed might have been taken under the principles of the League Covenant, clearly demonstrate that the entire civilized world at least spiritually stands behind China in her present fight against the aggressor. The League reports further take cognizance of the important fact that Japan's action is a breach of her treaty obligations, notably those under the Nine-Power Treaty and the Kellogg-Briand Pact, and cannot be justified. It is hoped that positive measures will soon be devised to call a halt of Japan's wanton violations of international treaties and elementary principles of justice and humanity."

Referring to the speech of President Roosevelt and the statement of the Secretary of State, laying treaty violations to Japan, Dr. Wang said: "The principles enunciated have afforded a timely basis for collaboration between the League of Nations and the United States in a concerted effort to terminate th einternational aggression. The consensus of civilized opinion both within and without the League of Nations has been an important instrument of peace which has been broken in the Far East. The problem facing the civilized socjety is how to restore the sanctity of international treaties and to rescue the world from reversion of the state of international anarchy. The events in the Far East since 1931 culminating at Japan's present large scale invasion of the Chinese territory constitute an object lesson to us all, namely that the mere reiteration of pious hopes and resolutions will be no restraint upon Japan's aggressive actions. If peace is to be restored in this part of the world, the peace-loving nations must be prepared to take positive measures to defend the laws and principles which form the very basis of civilization."

Fort Myer Rites For Col. Barnes

Funeral services for Col. Joseph F. Barnes, 59, who died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital, will be held at 2 p. m. Monday in Fort Myer Chapel, with members of Col. Barnes' West Point class as pallbearers. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

After graduation from West Point, Col. Barnes was commissioned in the Artillery Corps, and served in the Philippines and China. He was later an instructor at West Point. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for duty in the World War, in which he served as adjutant general of the First Army and commanding officer of several Field Artillery regiments.

Col. Barnes retired last year after post-war tours of duty in Panama, China, and Washington. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Edith Barnes.

Mrs. Taylor Dies; Leader in Masons

Mrs. Fanny Taylor, the widow of Miles Taylor, secretary of Senator David Walsh, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Elmer T. Cummins, 30 East Bradley lane, after a long illness.

She was active in Eastern Star and Masonic work, being a charter member of Naomi Chapter, No. 3, which was organized here in 1895.

She was chapter matron in 1901 and grand matron of the District of Columbia in 1912, and was instrumental in starting the Eastern Star endowment for the Eastern Star-Masonic Home. For 15 years she was a member of the executive committee of the home.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Cummins and Mrs. Helen Stinebarger. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Burial Set Monday For John Spengler

Funeral services for John Spengler, 80, who died yesterday at his home, 1214 Euclid street, will be conducted at the residence at 2:30 p. m. Monday. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Spengler, a Washington resident since childhood, retired in 1929 as a salesman for the Charles Schneider Baking Co. He was the father of Henry C. Spengler, killed in action in France and cited for gallantry.

He is survived by a son, Frederick H. Spengler, of Washington; three daughters, Miss Anna R. Spengler and Miss Kathryn E. Spengler, both of this city, and Mrs. Edwin H. Johnson, Buffalo, N. Y.; a brother, Louis C. Spengler, of Chicago, and two sisters, Mrs. W. Charles Heitmuller and Mrs. George W. Esterler, both of Washington.

Mrs. Laura Stone's Burial Here Today

Mrs. Laura Virginia Stone, 83, died Thursday at the Howard County, Md., home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Cissel Simpson, it was learned here yesterday.

Mrs. Stone was the widow of William Ridgely Stone, Washington druggist, and lived in Washington until two years ago.

She is survived by a son, William Ridgeley Stone, president of Stone's Mercantile Agency, Inc.; a daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Kerfoot, of Riverdale, Md.; two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Stone will be buried today in Rock Creek Cemetery after funeral services at 2 p. m. at Mrs. Simpson's home.

Chinese Leader Asks Sympathy Of U. S. People

All-China Liberation Representative Pays Visit to Capital.

Heng Chih Tao, a representative of the All-China Liberation Association, was in Washington yesterday seeking the co-operation and sympathy of Americans for China in her struggle against Japanese aggression.

"My mission," he stated, "is to interpret the Far Eastern crisis to China's friends in the interest of peace, for China is defending not only her territory but also democracy."

Coincident with Tao's arrival, a radiogram came from Mrs. Sun Yat Sen appealing to the Committee for Industrial Organization "to initiate the movement to boycott Japanese goods . . . and to accord all possible support to Chinese resistance against Japanese destruction of civilization." Ralph Emerson, of the National Maritime Union, stated that the telegram would be presented at the conference of C. I. O. leaders in Atlantic City next week and to the American Federation of Labor and other labor organizations.

Mme. Sun Yat Sen is head of the National Salvation Association, of which Tao is a member of the executive council. He explained that, in championing the principles of her husband, the late Dr. Sun Yat Sen, she is working with China's leaders for complete unity throughout China. For all parties there are three chief aims: Unity against Japanese aggression, democracy, and free education for all. Dr. Sun Yat Sen was strongly in favor of union with Communist forces for the good of China, and Mme. Sun Yat Sen has been influential in bringing the Nationalist and Communist armies together in the present struggle against Japan.

W. J. Hayward Dies; Ex-Railroad Head

Walter Jerome Hayward, 63, formore president of the Chesapeake Beach Railroad, died yesterday morning at his home, 2307 First street northwest, after an illness of nearly two years.

Mr. Hayward had lived in Washington for 38 years. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ida R. Hayward, and a son, Walter Jerome Hayward, jr.

'World's Liberal Spirit in Peril,' New Yale Head Asks Student Aid

Dr. Seymour Says Colleges Must Stand as Bulwark Against Reaction and 'Blind Revolt;' Four Educators Join in Appeal for Peace.

By the Associated Press.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 8.—Dr. Charles Seymour, asserting that the "liberal spirit in the world at large is in deadly peril," pledged Yale University to "absolute intellectual freedom" today in formally accepting the presidency of the school.

"We may look across the seas and take warning," the 52-year-old historian told the academic gathering which filled ivy-covered Battell Chapel for the installation ceremony.

"The Yale atmosphere must be so completely impregnated with the sense of freedom," he said, "that our students going from here will serve naturally and universally as its apostles.

"Every student at Yale should be impressed with the conviction that only through the spread of the liberal attitude in life can the Nation find protection from an obscurantist reaction on the one hand or a blind revolution on the other."

Dr. Seymour, accepting the traditional symbols of the office previously held by two other members of his family, said that at Yale "we will seek the truth, and will endure the consequences."

He warned that "unless the complete spirit of academic freedom prevails among students and scholars, freedom from external influence and internal pressure, we commit the unforgiveable sin against the first of academic principles."

The ceremonies at which Yale installed Dr. Seymour as her fifteenth president followed a tradition established soon after the university was founded, when Connecticut was a British colony.

Gov. Wilbur L. Cross, president fellow of the Yale Corporation, greeted the new president, successor to Dr. James Rowland Angell, with a Latin salutation and then turned over to him the symbols of his authority, the Yale charter, the keys, the records and the seal.

The exercises were identical in form with those used at the installation of Seymour's great-great-great-grandfather, Thomas Clap, in 1740, and at that of his great-uncle, Jeremiah Day, in 1817.

Appeal for Peace.

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 8 (AP).—Dr. Edmund Ezra Day became Cornell University's fifth president today as four leading educators appealed for a regeneration of education's ideals to bring world peace through understanding.

Dr. Day asserted that "when men in power conclude that ideas should come from authority and not from thought, men of reason must give battle."

Dr. Day said that the use by governments of "armed, aggressive and arrogant" force, the love of money, the "insistence" upon vocational education and upon "quick practical results * * * has made it difficult for the university, even when its vision is clear, to adhere strictly to its fundamental purpose."

Three other speakers, Dr. Ernest M. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth College; Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, and Dr. Alexander G. Ruthven, president of the University of Michigan, three institutions that fostered Dr. Day's 30 years in education, joined in appealing for a revivifying of university ideals.

Annapolis Allots Additional Hours To War Subjects

A revised curriculum has been adopted at the Naval Academy upon the recommendation of Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent, and of a special board, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

The board recommended that courses in "strictly professional subjects" be strengthened at the expense of the nonprofessional courses.

A course in economics has been eliminated, and that in Government is taught now by a new department of English, history and government. The time gained has been allotted to professional subjects, particularly navigation, naval officials said.

Joseph L. Boscoe Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Joseph L. Boscoe, 47, who died yesterday at Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, Md., after a long illness, will be conducted at 10 a. m. today at Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

A native of Washington, Mr. Boscoe attended public schools here and later graduated from Emerson Institute and the Bliss Electrical School. He was employed for many years as an electrical engineer by the H. P. Foley Co., electrical contractors.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Henrietta Boscoe; a daughter, Miss Marguerite Boscoe; his father, E. Boscoe, and a brother, Oresta Boscoe.

George McCann, 53, Long in Army, Dies

Funeral services for George McCann, 53, who died yesterday at his home, 16 Aspen street, will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow in W. R. Pumphrey's funeral parlors, 7005 Wisconsin avenue, Bethesda, Md. Mr. McCann will be buried in a Chester, Pa., cemetery.

Mr. McCann was chief engineer of the cannon section of the Army Ordnance Department.

A graduate of Drexel Institute, in Philadelphia, he had served the Ordnance Department for more than 20 years.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lydia A. McCann; a daughter, Miss Mary McCann, and a son, Robert McCann; his mother, Mrs. Mary McCann, and a brother, S. Austin McCann, both of New Castle, Del.

Brother-in-Law Dead, Mrs. Kasehagen Hears

Word has been received here by Mrs. Leo Kasehagen, 1353 Jefferson street northwest, of the death of her brother-in-law, Hon. Maj. Frederick Carpenter-Holland-Grimth, 66, late of the Connaught Rangers. He died of a heart attack at his Welsh estate, Crregiwyd-Anglesey. He is survived by his wife, the former Mrs. Royston St. Noble, of Barcelona, Spain, who before her marriage was Rosaman Higginbotham, of Mountvale, Va.; a brother, several nieces and nephews.

$9,500,000 Given For Tenant Loans

By the United Press.

The Farm Security Administration last night announced opening of its farm tenancy program with distribution of $9,500,000 under title 1 of the Bankhead farm tenant act with the State of Texas receiving almost one-tenth of the total.

The funds will be loaned to competent tenants, farm laborers and sharecroppers for purchase of farms. Loans will be in approximately 300 counties in the 1937-38 fiscal year.

Applications for loans may be filed with county rural rehabilitation supervisors. Paul V. Maris, of Corvallis, Oreg., has been designated director of the tenant purchase division of the Farm Security Administration.

Allotments of funds for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, included Maryland $45,244, and Virginia, $213,967.

Reich Architects To Tour Federal Buildings Today

Washington will be host today and tomorrow to 31 German architects, engineers and builders who are studying housing and public building construction in the United States.

The group, which arrived last night, will start this morning by visiting the new Zoo buildings, the Government Printing Office annex and other Government projects. Lunch will be serviced in the basement of the G. P. O. annex.

This afternoon the guests will inspect the new Interior Building and make a city-wide tour. At 5:30 p. m. they will be received by Ambassador Dieckhoff at his home, 2929 Massachusetts avenue northwest. Officials of the Treasury Department procurement division and other Government agencies, as well as local leaders in private industry, will serve as guides.

The Washington Post

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

(Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

The oval room, in which President Roosevelt receives his callers and does most of his work, with its greenish hues and its indirect lighting around the tops of the walls, gives a little the impression of a goldfish bowl or an aquarium.

Its profusion of marine engravings, prints, ship models and curios, its tall windows, opening graciously toward the porches, terraces and gardens, leave it little of an office or workroom atmosphere . . . It is very relaxing.

The Cabinet room is a more somber setting for solemn thinking, though probably more talking than thinking occurs there . . . The President's office doesn't exactly mirror his personality; I think it is more an accidental flowering of hobbies, tastes and the exigencies of architecture and decoration.

"——like a gold-fish bowl."

Most of Mr. Roosevelt's loftier aides have bigger desks than his; it is neither large nor ponderous . . . Were it five times as large it probably would be equally crowded with the unique curios and objets de art which he collects and which are showered upon him, for which he must have a genuine attachment.

Mrs. Roosevelt's serialized memoirs reveal a number of important things about him and shatter quite a few legends . . . On their honeymoon he was an inveterate prowler in book and print shops . . . Personally he is quite frugal, habitually counting the dimes if not the pennies. My guess is that Mrs. Roosevelt's memoirs are responsible for her notable return to popularity on her recent Western trip.

They reveal also that she holds him in the moderate awe which is only proper in a wife toward her husband . . . He is definitely the master of his household, and very positive in his personal predilections, but entirely tolerant and reasonable toward the individual quirks of his family.

In fact, Mrs. Roosevelt knocks the props completely from under Alice Longworth's famous witticism that "Franklin is one-third mush and two-thirds Eleanor" . . . For once Princess Alice let her flair for the bon mot run away with her keen sense of realities . . . Mr. Roosevelt may go down in history as The Great Uncompromiser.

There is no mush in the President's personality . . . He has, on the contrary, a rare and indomitable streak of impatient stubbornness in his make-up, fortified by a streak of stubborn impatience . . . In him a forgotten grain of sand like NRA becomes, by accretion, a cherished pearl. It is inevitable that he will spring it again. He can ride an uppercut and come back swinging.

"——Eleanor shatters Alice's gag."

Even with his prodigious memory, Mr. Roosevelt makes no pretense of remembering the colossal mass of details that encumber his job . . . He leaves these to aides, who vie in prompting him during press conferences . . . Actually, he enjoys flabbergasting a reporter with a positive, emphatic assertion that he knows nothing about something that seems pregnant with importance to the questioner; hasn't even heard of it.

He gets a chuckle out of the "no one tells me anything" pose . . . He is obviously fond of people, enjoys the interplay and flavor of personalities and is a connoisseur of the whimseys and foibles of those around him, which he searches out with a ju-jitsu wit . . . His quips might draw blood if they weren't so amiable.

I hear that at his own dinner table the President is apt to ask his guests some embarrassing questions, and takes occasional potshots at what he thinks are his economic prejudices . . . Mrs. R. is on the job every minute, softening the punches.

* * * *

In most people who come near him Mr. Roosevelt inspires a deep and delighted affection . . . Against this attachment most of those who strive to preserve an impartial and critical attitude must fight consciously . . . Many of his bitterest critics would succumb to his personality—and to the immaculacy of his purposes—and work shoulder to shoulder with him, if he'd let them, on a good-neighbor basis.

Chest Campaign Pledged Support

Assurance of a "united front" of presidents of agencies affiliated with the Community Chest for the tenth anniversary campaign was given yestreday at a meeting at the Mayflower Hotel. Approximately 40 of the 64 Washington agencies affiliated with the Chest were represented.

Clarence Phelps Dodge, president of the Community Chest, declared his belief that the goal of $2,050,000 would be reached next month.

Loans Sought To Start Free School Lunches

Use of $10,000 Will Begin Aid to Hungry Now, Mrs. Boyle Says.

Immediate cash loans totaling $10,000 are being sought by the citizens' emergency committee, in order that needy District school children may not have to wait until end of the present drive to begin having hot meals at lunch time.

"We can look ahead to much money, but the WPA has said that with $10,000 available the project can be written and put under way within 24 hours. We will pay the money back within 30 days, and are merely asking for an advance," Mrs. John Boyle, jr., committee chairman, declared last night.

First to make an advance was Joe Turner, who yesterday let the committee have his check for $1,000. Turner and Goldie Ahearn are promoters of the lunch benefit boxing show to be held October 18.

Reports from District policemen and firemen selling tickets to the 38-round show yesterday showed that police sales have reached $594 and the fire department sales have amounted to $292, with two battalions of firemen yet to send in returns. Additional tickets are being asked by numerous groups, particularly in the first precinct, where 15,000 are said to be needed.

Other contributions to the fund to date total almost $1,000, leaving around $7,000 needed to start the lunch program immediately.

Monday, the committee will open its "Take a Hungry Child to Lunch" campaign, with posters and receptacles for money in 2,000 restaurants, theaters, and business places in the city.

Each lunch costs but 7 cents, which is the amount which will be asked.

Approximately 100 representatives from "every business, civic and fraternal group in town" attended the businessmen's luncheon held yesterday at the Harrington Hotel, with Arthur Clarendon Smith as chairman.

Theodore S. Grape, president of the Federation of Business Men's Clubs, sent a telegram to the luncheon pledging co-operation.

The Lincoln Post of the American Legion yesterday sent in a contribution and promised its aid in any other way needed. Local 249, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, of the National Federation of Federal Employes, also sent a contribution.

Most churches of the city, Mrs. Boyle announced, are making plans to set aside Sunday as "Children's Day" and to have a special contribution for the lunch fund at services.

Frank Buckley spoke over Radio Station WJSV last night on "Why Should They Hunger?"

A meeting of the colored committee formed to help sponsor the boxing show was held at the home of Attorney George Hayes at 1732 S street northwest.

Among committee members promising active co-operation were former Judge James M. Cobb, Deputies Marshal Tecumseh Bradshaw and Robert Taylor, Dr. F. W. Williston, Emery B. Smith, attorney, and Jack Rhines, athletic director for the Benevolent Order of Elks. Blocks of tickets were taken at the meeting by the Crystal Caverns Club and the Capital City Club.

Air Line Will Pay Pilots Regardless Of Halted Flights

Salaries approximating their previous annual monthly income, irrespective of hours flown, will be paid to pilots of planes in scheduled operations on United Air Lines, President W. A. Patterson announced yesterday. Effective November 1, the new policy will continue throughout the winter months, guaranteeing assigned and reserve fliers a steady income, irrespective of trips completed or canceled.

General airline procedure is to pay pilots on the basis of hours or miles flown during the month, plus an established base pay, officials of the transport company explained.

By the new method, Patterson declared, "the pilots in our flying personnel are paid for their judgment not to start a trip as well as to start one. * * * Our new procedure is, in our opinion, increasing the margin of safety."

Children Form Safety Clubs at Western High

Van Duzer and Holmes Explain Traffic Plan to Student Meeting.

The first high school "Trafficlub," dedicated to the protection of children using congested city streets, was organized yesterday at Western High School.

Greeted with enthusiasm by several hundred Western students, plans for the safety movement were outlined by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, Inspector William E. Holmes, police traffic supervisor, and Richard Ham, safety director for the American Automobile Club.

A driver-testing device was wheeled onto the auditorium stage shortly before the speakers were introduced, and several youngsters were put through rigid driving examinations.

Dr. Elmer S. Newton, principal of the school, refused to take the tests, explaining:

"I have always had a horror of intelligence tests and things of that kind."

Adrian Recinos, son of the minister from Guatemala, leader of the school "Trafficlub" movement, described purposes of the plan, and announced that similar organizations would be introduced in other schools throughout the city.

Members of the various "Trafficlubs" will attend inquests at the District Morgue, visit the traffic courts, and enforcement bureaus, and study a definite program for safeguarding all District students.

Parking Meter Rates Set in Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Oct. 8.—Parking meters for Hagerstown were authorized by ordinance last night by City Council. The ordinance provides for a multiple coin meter, 1 cent for 10 minutes and 5 cents for 1 hour. The meters will be installed on four city blocks as a starter.

$1.50 Sales Tax Urged by Group In Brightwood

Citizens Association Calls for Repeal of Business Privilege Levy.

The Brightwood Citizens Association last night demanded repeal of the business privilege tax, asked that the tax on real estate be set back to $1.50 a $100 assessed valuation and recommended that the 1939 District budget not exceed $45,000,000.

Their action came after they had heard William McK. Clayton, white-haired federation delegate, attack the new taxes and declare that "the present monstrosity" of taxation isn't altogether due to Congress; the major part of the trouble is right in the District Building."

Clayton also advised the Brightwood association to urge Congress to exempt home owners from certain taxes. "The family is important to the Republic," he said, "and if anything goes wrong with the family, something is also bound to go wrong with the country."

The association endorsed a movement now underway to start a new bank in Brightwood. It was explained that a charter for a "Northwest National Bank" has already been applied for. The proposed new bank would have a total capitalization of $125,000. Stockholders would not incur double liability.

Charles W. Ray was re-elected president of the association to serve his twenty-stcond term. Other officers elected last night were Col. John Clagett Proctor, first vice president; L. F. Randolph, second vice president; Prof. L. J. Cantrell, third vice president; A. Y. Casanova, fourth vice president; J. W. Ferriter, corresponding secretary; Elmer Johnson, financial secretary and treasurer. Clayton and John A. Saul were named lelegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Pleasant Plains Ask Vote

Resolutions urging that local suffrage be granted the District and that members of the Board of Education continue to be appointed by District judges were passed by the Pleasant Plains Civic Association at a meeting last night at Monroe School, on Columba road.

Practical aid was given the District's hungry children by a resolution appropriating $25 to the free lunch fund.

Zoo Editor Gulps Dictionary, Now Mumbles Strange Words

Plethora Really Should Be Big Game Animal, He Declares.

You know how, altogether unconsciously, you associate certain faces with certain names or things. For example, you pass a stranger on the street and something about his haircut, or his walk makes you say to yourself, "I'll bet his name is Jack," or "Wonder why he reminds me of peanuts."

Well, the Zoo Names editor, steeped for more than a week now in a steadily increasing brew of nominations for the Zoo's new animals, gradually is becoming "tetched," and his main symptom is picking out words, and mumbling that they ought to represent animals.

"Take the word, 'plethora,'" he was overheard to mutter to himself yesterday. "It's much too good to be wasted on such a meaning as superabundance. Plethora should be the name of a big game animal. I can just hear the returning hunter complaining, 'Well, there was a paucity of plethora today.'"

Not only that, but the Z. N. E. says that to him "tycoon" no longer means "an industrial magnate" but a species of monkey closely related to the baboon. Nor can he understand why "femur" is the doctor's name for the thigh bone when all you have to do is substitute an "l" for the "f" and you have a small mammal.

"Let the femur be a second cousin to the lemur," he said with feeling.

A good night's sleep, abstinence from animal crackers and a few aspirins are expected, however, to bring the Zoo Names Editor back to normal today so keep mailing in your selections with full assurance they'll be carefully considered.

Pair o' Bear

Probably there is no more playful pair of animals that debarked from Zoo Director William M. Mann's ark—or even the original ark—than the Himalayan bear couple who are now ensconced in the small mammal house.

"The bear that walks like a man," as Kipling described him, is easily recognizable by the white chevron on his chest. In his native Asiatic haunts he is most likely to be found in forest country, where he lives on vegetables, and is a good swimmer and climber.

Despite his gay disposition, he has been known to attack natives.

Among the name suggestions for the pair which have been sent in to date are Jane and Ronald, Corporal and Madame, Roly and Poly. If you are not on the nominating list yet, fill the dotted lines with your preference and mail ballot to the Zoo Names Editor, Washington Post.

Leaders Pass Road Blame In Maryland

Democratic Faction Calls Highway Officials 'Inefficient.'

Tabler Holds Legislature to Blame for Ills of System.

The State of Maryland once possessed finer highways than any other State in the Nation. Now, because of political bickerings and executive red tape, she stands twenty-fifth on the list. Believing that safety ought to stand ahead of the interests of politics, The Post presents today the seventh of a series of articles explaining the situation.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 8.—That politics, bickering and confusing red tape have played an important part in retarding Maryland's State highway development was evidenced here today in a new outburst of charges and counter-charges between Democratic leaders and the State Roads Commission.

Assailing Dr. Homer E. Tabler, State roads chairman, for his recent criticism of the State Legislature's failure to provide highway funds, Delegate Kent R. Mullikin and Senator J. Allan Coad, Legislature floor leaders, branded State road officials as "inefficient."

Earlier, in a statement charging the Legislature with refusal to provide highway construction and maintenence funds, Dr. Tabler declared:

"It is going to be too bad for the Democrats when the public realizes what the Democratic Legislature has done for the State roads system."

Democrats Reply.

In a prepared statement yesterday, Democratic leaders countered:

"When the people of Maryland realize what the Democratic Legislature did do for the State roads system by restoring $3,300,000 which had been taken from the road funds by the Governor for the purpose of balancing his budget, they will probably be very thankful to the Democratic Legislature.

"The trouble today with the Maryland road system," said the Legislature members, "is not nearly so much due to a lack of funds as to lack of efficient administration on the part of the State Roads Commission, headed by Dr. Tabler."

And, with hazardous conditions of State highways throughout the metropolitan area of Baltimore and Washington under fire from all sides, Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, added a new spark to the flames by declaring:

"I think it is a fair statement of the situation to say that the public lacks confidence in the State Roads Commission. Our State highway system has lost the high place it once held, and efforts made in recent years to improve and restore the system have failed to reach their goal.

Criticism Long Past.

"A long time has elapsed since it appeared that the financial relations of the State Roads Commission with the political subdivisions were subject to criticism and that the diversion by the Governor and the Legislature of road funds to other purposes was creating insurmountable handicaps," Mayor Jackson said.

In announcing his candidacy for the nomination of Maryland's Governor, Mayor Jackson promised "a complete reorganization of the State Roads Commission as to personnel and methods of removal of injurious politics."

Meanwhile, as the battle of words continues, death traps along the Crain and Defense highways—heavily traveled by Baltimore and Washington motorists—remain untouched.

Appeal Is Refused In Liquor Tax Case

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday refused to review the conviction of Emanuel Rosensweig, one-time liquor store proprietor, who was found guilty of having a small quantity of unstamped liquor in his store two years ago.

Attorney Alvin L. Newmyer, representing Rosensweig, contended that the liquor, which was stored in the basement of the store, was not actually on the "licensed premises" and was not, therefore, subject to the requirements of the District Alcohol Beverage Control Board.

Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran, who heard the case, took Rosensweig's personal bond. The appellate court did not give its reason for refusing to review the case.

Victim of Auto Crash Asks $20,000 Damage

Alleging she was seriously hurt in an automobile accident at South Dakota and Rhode Island avenues northeast, Thursday afternoon, Hazel E. Welker, of Baltimore, Md., yesterday in District Court filed suit against Clyde Toutant, Montpelier, Vt., for $20,000 damages. She said Toutant's automobile was being driven by another man.

Through Attorneys Charles S. Baker, B. L. Tepper and Robert H. Marcus, she alleged the machine that struck the car in which she was riding was not being operated in accordance with the District's traffic laws. The suit was filed within 24 hours of the time of the accident.

ARTHUR DEAN SWIFT.

'Modern Gulliver' Pauses Here en Route to Miami and an Heiress (if He Can Find One); Finds Businessmen His Most Dependable Patrons.

Arthur Dean Swift figures that the world owes him a living and admits that the debt is being paid off fast.

Swift is 21 years old and concedes that he has "a way with people." He must have, because for the past four years he's bummed his way about the world, stopping at the best hotels and indulging in the most luxurious living.

Refusing to let modesty interfere with truth, Swift attributed his success as a vagrant to his faith in businessmen.

"When I started on the road I was a personality problem," he said. "But one man I found I could get along with was the businessman. Whenever I get into a town where there are plenty of businessmen, I feel happy."

"I have a nice approach," he admitted, hitching his khaki trousers up to display a pair of socks that once were white. "Being a modern Gulliver, I feel that I have a right to something better."

Swift formulated his unique design for living at the Chicago World's Fair. He discovered then that when he needed a handout he did better "by approaching the "big shots" than by hitting the hot-dog stands. Since then, he says, he's traveled 104,501 miles, been deported to England, where he was born, and deported back again, and won a trip from England to France on the pretext of joining the Foreign Legion.

Whenever the postmaster agrees, he has the postal clerk stamp his diary to prove he's been in the town.

He borrowed $20 from Henry Ford. "I called him Henry," he boasted. He once obtained a free airplane ride from Detroit to New York.

His plans now call for a trip to Wilmington to see one of the Duponts, "anyone that has money. I don't care which it is," and then a swift trip to New York. He intends to fly to Miami for the winter season and hopes to meet an heiress who wants publicity.

"She'd get lots of publicity if she married me, but that's all she'd get," Swift said as he asked how much space he was going to get today.

Women's Pairs To Mrs. Clarke And Mrs. White

Champion, Partner Defeat Mrs. Van Nuys, Mrs. Van Deventer.

By Marian H. Barre.

Forging up from fifth place in the first session, Mrs. V. A. Clarke, defending champion, and Mrs. H. C. White won the women's pair contest in the District of Columbia bridge championships yesterday afternoon. The winners had a lead of 33½ match points over Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys and Mrs. Winslow Van Deventer, who had top score in the first session.

Mrs. M. R. West, codefender of the trophy, playing with Mrs. J. H. Lemon, finished in third place with a score of 351 points after tying for tenth position in the initial session. Another pair to improve their position by a final spurt was Mrs. Allan Rutherford, of Baltimore, and Mrs. E. B. Swanson, vice chairman of the tournament committee, who scored 349½ points for fourth place. Mrs. Daisy Hubbard Mott, the most recent woman master in the District, and Mrs. C. W. Boyce finished fifth, with 348½ points.

The runners-up were the only pair who played steady bridge through both sessions. Other pairs who were trailers on Thursday came to the front for the finish, and other leaders dropped back. Mrs. E. L. Clites and Mrs. C. W. Zimmer dropped from second to eighth; Mrs. C. B. Pennebaker and Mrs. A. P. Stockvis, from third to seventh. Mrs. Robert Fuller and Mrs. William McKenny slightly bettered their position by making eleventh place.

Leftists at G. W. Gain Strength; 'Centers' Win 37 Union Seats

Leftists are increasing at George Washington University, so much so that they came within three votes yesterday of polling a plurality of of ballots in the election for the union, G. W. student legislature.

As it was, the Center Party won the largest number of seats in the union—37. James P. Speer 2d, of Comanche, Okla., its candidate, becomes president of the union.

The George Washington University Union was set up two years ago by the students to afford an opportunity for practice in parliamentary procedure and to serve as a forum for views on public affairs. It is modeled after parliamentary bodies at Oxford and Cambridge.

President-elect Speer, who is majoring in foreign service, made this comment on yesterday's election returns:

"I believe that the close vote will benefit the union by creating more interest in the minority parties. The majority party will have to be on its mettle even more in the future to retain its leadership."

D.C. Tax Bills Will Cover 3 Levy Sources

Capital to Protect Self Against Rejection of Any Proposal.

Legislation to Embrace Modified Business, Sales, Income Taxes.

The District Commissioners will not be caught napping by Congress next year if the city's legislative body should reject the Commissioners' recommendation as to local taxes.

Meeting yesterday with the District tax committee and its advisory council, the city heads instructed the committee to draft legislation on each of the major revenue proposals although probably only one will be submitted when Congress convenes.

These bills will cover (1) a modified business privilege tax, (2) an income tax, and (3) a sales tax.

Last spring, after the Commissioners had recommended a sales tax, the House District Committee first demanded an income tax and subsequently a business privilege tax. In both instances District officials were forced to draft the legislation hastily with the result they now admit there are many inequities in the gross receipts tax.

Separate Meetings Planned.

The two tax investigation groups decided to hold separate meetings for a while, but with the understanding that the city officials will submit figures and legislative drafts to the advisory committee of civic and trade spokesman as rapidly as they are prepared.

Before the program is submitted to the Commissioners the two committees will hold joint sessions in an effort to present a united front on the tax proposals.

The advisory committee yesterday elected L. A. Carruthers, chairman of the fiscal relations committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, as chairman and Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, as secretary.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, as chairman of the District government committee, told the conferees that he is preparing charts and tables which will disclose estimates of municipal revenue and expenditures over the fiscal period 1939-1945.

Realty Tax Cut Sought.

The aim of the tax investigators, he said, will be to draft revenue proposals to cover the spread between income and expenses for each of these years.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen told the committee he hoped the new tax program will enable the District heads to reduce the realty tax rate, which Congress boosted to $1.75 last session. He expressed a belief that $1.60 would be a fair rate.

The immediate goal of the committees will be to propose taxes that will raise $5,500,000 during the next fiscal year, as this amount of estimated revenue this year will not be carried over into the next year.

Both the business privilege tax and the 25-cent increase in the realty rate expire on June 30, 1938. The gross receipts tax is expected to return $3,000,000 and the realty increase will raise $2,500,000.

Boy Bicyclist Spills, Suffers Concussion

Falling off his bicycle while on the way to the Zoo yesterday, John Henry Jones, a student at Adams School, suffered possible skull fracture and concussion and was sent to Gallinger Hospital.

The boy lives at 2318 Eighteenth street northwest. While riding in Rock Creek Park, he tumbled over the handlebars of the bicycle and hit his head. Picked up by a passing motorist, the boy was taken home, where he had no recollection of the spill.

Gladys George Wrings Tears In Bitter Role

'Madame X' Is Relieved by 'Dixie Jubilee' at Capitol.

"MADAME X." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the play by Alexandra Bisson, adapted to the screen by John Meehan, starring Gladys George, with Warren William, John Beal, Henry Daniell, Reginald Owen, William Henry, Philip Reed, Lynn Carver, Emma Dunn, Luis Alberni, George Zucco, Cora Witherspoon and Jonathan Hale. Directed by Sam Wood. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

In the top row of those sure-fire dramas that are "must" items for each new crop of playgoers is "Madame X," which has wrung enough tears in its time to fill a city reservoir. When a producer trots out his version of "Madame X" it always means chortles in the box office and widespread sobs and sniffles in the audience.

The current "Madame X" differs chiefly from its predecessors in that part of its action takes place in the United States. The unhappy Jacqueline flees France with an American yachtsman (married), lingers in Manhattan until all her jewels are pawned and finally drifts to New Orleans as a honky-tonk hostess. Fired from her hostess job because she gets too drunkee, she takes up with the captain of a tramp steamer and winds up in Buenos Aires, last port for blondes. Here she meets the gambler, La Roque, who finally takes her back to Paris on the blackmail venture which costs him his life.

Grace George has the meatiest dramatic role of her career and does not miss a morsel of it. Her make-up of the tobogganing Jacqueline is, in itself, a masterpiece. Without overdoing it, the transition from youth to haggard dissipation and old age creeps on in every succeeding shot. Miss George's performance compares well with that of Ruth Chatterton, who was the last movie "Madame X," except in some earlier scenes. But later on, especially in the courtroom scenes, the George performance takes on a wracking power.

Beal Is Able Actor.

John Beal is far and away the best son that "Madame X" has had in the films. From being just a fairly smooth young leading man, he turns out to be a real actor. There is something genuinely touching in his gaucho young French barrister who is swept into eloquence by the unknowable tie of sympathy between him and his life-ruined client, who, unknown to him, is his mother.

Warren William contributes another practically ideal characterization, as the husband who turns Jacqueline into "Madame X" by refusing to pardon her first indiscretion. Reginald Owen lends geniality by his interpretation of the benevolent M. Beuriot, while William Henry plays the slightly caddish American yachtsman.

The production is, in general, an opulent one, although Dolly Tree's costuming is hardly inspired.

Subsidiaries and Stage.

Applause greeted the President and his newsreel pronouncimento on the American stand on war. A Bert Lahr comedy and an amusing short showing children engaging in all sorts of athletic stunts complete the celluloid fare.

Phil Lampkin and his orchestra offer a pleasant and timely musical specialty based on the football season.

Major Bowes "Dixie Jubilee" presents an all-sepia flock of amateur entertainers, red hot and ra'rin' to go. Hit of the show was Billy Irons, who dances on roller skates. Other topsters were Ann Cooper, who can make a trumpet talk a la Armstrong, the Lindy Hoppers and the Starlight Dixie Trio. The Black Rhythm Band excels in a fancy swing number. We hate to say it, but we fear the good gray Major didn't polish the "Dixie Jubilee" off as carefully as he does most of his offerings.

RKO-Keith's

"MUSIC FOR MADAME." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Robert Harari, adapted to the screen by the author and Gertrude Purcell, starring Nino Martini, supported by Joan Fontaine, Alan Hale, Alice Mowbray, Lee Patrick, Grant Mitchell, and Billy Gilbert. Directed by John Blystone. Reviewed Friday evening by Dorothea Lewis.

This is just a little farce with a little music. The plot sets itself a big handicap in the beginning. Starring a tenor, the picture lets him sing just twice before it makes that voice the one clew that could cause his arrest. After that it is quite a problem to let Mr. Martini burst into song at all.

Martini plays an engaging young Italian tenor en route to Hollywood, singing as he goes. Before he even gets to that fabulous town's city limits he is picked up by two "benefactors," who star him that very night in a clever holdup at a great Hollywood gathering. While he sings, they steal the pearls! Since the young man's figure was swathed in a clown costume, and his face covered with grease paint, the police have only a voice to search for. The madame of the title merely complicates the plot by being a fetching love interest who must not learn of the tenor's voice or his past.

Martini's amplified voice is quite lovely to listen to, his personality is engaging, but his English pretty garbled. Joan Fontaine, the blond sister of Olivia De Haviland, is attractive as the leading lady, suggesting the quiet, ladylike charm of Madge Evans and looking a little like sister Olivia.

Alan Mowbray's burlesque conductor is only mildly amusing, though Mr. Mowbray seems to do all he can with it, playing with more subtlety of attack than characterizes the very broad methods of various other members of the cast.

The music includes "Music for Madame," "I Want the World to Know," "Bambini" and the "Vesti La Guibba" aria.

Much more important to our way of thinking than the feature picture is the new issue of "The March of Time." All three items it chronicles are interesting, but it is the concluding chapter devoted to that fiery, honest and genuine little mayor of the Nation's biggest city, Fiorella LaGuardia, that makes it a really valuable document. Fiorella plays himself, and does handsomely. The other subjects are "Junk and War," and "England's D. O. R. A. Laws," revealing the truth about prohibition in London.

There is also a new Mickey Mouse cartoon, "Hawaiian Holiday," having great fun with a star-fish, a lobster, a surf board and Donald Duck. The Pathe News completes the bill.

'Bride Wore Red,' Neat Comedy-Romance, at Palace; Earle Boasts Generous Stage and Screen Program

"THE BRIDE WORE RED." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Ferenc Molnar's "The Girl From Trieste," starring Joan Crawford, with Franchot Tone, Robert Young, Lynn Carver, Billie Burke, Reginald Owen, George Zucco, Pasi Porcasi, Mary Phillips, Dickie Moore and Frank Puglia. Directed by Dorothy Arzner. Previewed Wednesday, October 6. At Loew's Palace Theater.

Launching his colorful fable with a brief exposition of the champagne philosophy of a heavy winner in Trieste's most ornate temple of chance, to the effect that all men are born equal, raiment and riches marking the only tangible differentiations among the social classes, Ferenc Molnar soon converts his study of caste into a romantic comedy in which his original premise is subordinated to less weighty considerations of the normal inclinations of young people in love.

BELL.

After the bibulous aristocrat, so lucky at the gaming tables, has failed to convince his younger and more sober friend that their waiter is probably more of a gentleman than either of them, he visits the tawdriest of Trieste's waterfront dives and there endows a cynical and slightly belligerent young singer with sufficient funds to support her in luxury for a fortnight at one of Italy's most sumptuous and most fashionable resort hotels, where he knows his incredulous drinking companion will be a guest.

Anna accepts the offer and presents herself under an assumed title at the hostelry that offers so vivid a contrast to every aspect of living to which she ever has been accustomed. Her blunders are many and obvious—especially to her waiter in the dining room, who becomes her unobstrusive social mentor—but not sufficiently flagrant to prevent the young man, for whose benefit she is enjoying this emancipation from habitual penury, from falling precipitately in love with her, despite the minor matter of a previous engagement to a charming member of his own exalted station.

Postman Also Rings.

The level-headed and slightly droll village postman, telegraph operator and general factotum in the quaint little mountain community also succumbs to the strange visitor's fascinations and is first to penetrate the nature of her mammoth deception.

The ensuing war of clashing viewpoints and emotional urges is a merry one. It involves gay village feast days and native dances, strolling troubadours, intercepted telegrams, giant suspicions and feminine intuitions. The final outcome is not too rigorously obscured, but so much is contributed to its accomplishment by the members of the splendid cast that "The Bride Wore Red" takes its place among the most agreeable vehicles its star has had in recent months. It might be catalogued as falling about midway between "I Live My Life" and "The Gorgeous Hussy" in its deft blending of the frivolous and the serious. At least, it develops its central character to a point where she came to hate the gaudy gown she thought at first was so matchlessly lovely.

Joan Crawford plays the title role with a simple directness that makes it one of her most effective characterizations. Her costumes lend a striking picturesqueness to many of the scenes, although personal adornment never is permitted to interfere with the substantial quality of her performance. Franchot Tone, as the sagacious postman, is even more repressed in method than in "Between Two Women" and his portrayal thereby takes on a stature a little greater than Robert Young in his impersonation of the high-born rival.

Superlative Support.

Three supporting roles are particularly well played. Billie Burke, as an unbelieving side-line observer of Anna's counterfeit behavior, is an irresistibly amusing damper on false aspirations; Reginald Owen has infinite trouble with his knees, and Lynn Carver is ingenuously charming as the young woman whom Anne seems most likely to cheat of her happiness. Mary Phillips, as the chambermaid who discovers in Anna a former associate of the quays, is another who adds both comedy and sound sense to a light and impeccably produced study in conscience and conquest, and Paul Porcasi, Frank Puglia and Master Dickie Moore add their share to the fine balance of the cast. The picture's scenic backgrounds are not the least impressive of its many conspicuous assets.

The supplementary attractions at the Palace this week are more than ordinarily well chosen. A Fitz-Patrick Traveltalk presents magnificent "Glimpses of Peru" in color; a novel note, with a fine ring of truth in it, is struck by "The Boss Didn't Say Good Morning," featuring Jack Mulhall, and Arthur Murray's "shag" dancers demonstrate how to dance the "Big Apple"—if your body is strung together on wires and your bones are made of rubber.

The "Events of the Day," giving unusually long footage to the President's Chicago speech, and not so much to Hitler and Mussolini, is the remaining auxiliary of a bill that immensely pleased yesterday's opening-day crowds.

Metropolitan

"Souls at Sea" has a soupcon of the love motif as addendum to the rousing adventurous theme about men who captained slave ships a century ago and about one man who hated the idea of trafficking in human cargo.

Gary Cooper is the man who tries, single-handed, to wipe out the slave trade; George Raft is his colleague, and Frances Dee and Olympe Bradna are the two charming girls who add that bit of romance.

Cooper is thoroughly at home in the role of the sailor who becomes embroiled in slave-trading through no desire of his own, who comes eventually to be commissioned by one of the Queen's naval officers to assist secretly in wiping out the evil. Raft is the attractive, illiterate mug who traipses around with Cooper, and is better than average as the colorful scamp who purloins Cooper's poetry to quote to his girl, who is newcomer Olympe Bradna, and charmingly does she register.

Henry Wilcoxon, Harry Carey, Virginia Weilder and others form a splendid supporting cast.

Thoughtfully directed, interestingly dialogued and superbly staged, this play is something for anyone who yearns for adventure.

Ken Murray and Oswald gallop through a comedy which is great fun. The newsreel contains excellent shots of the leaders of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., in addition to a really notable set of views of the President making his historic Chicago speech.

Columbia

Going into its doubling act on F street, "Double or Nothing" moves down to the Columbia this week and offers one of the best entertainment buys in town.

Bing Crosby, who has graduated into one of Hollywood's greatest via the crooner route, and that boisterous skyrocket, Martha Raye, are at their best in this diverting show, and their best is so good it's hard to believe.

The general idea of "Double or Nothing" is a giggle a minute, a song every five minutes and a dance in between. If you want to go to the movies purely for fun purposes and to laugh yourself into a mild fit, this show is your recipe.

While the strip-tease of burlycue would never do on the screen, Martha Raye still has a strip-tease of panicking proportions. Martha has a complex. When she hears a certain tune, she just has to begin peeling off her garments. Unluckily, the camera man always cuts when she is getting really dangerous.

This Is the Bride Who Wore It

Cast in the role of a singer in a low waterfront cabaret in Trieste, in "The Bride Wore Red," at Loew's Palace, Joan Crawford offers a portrayal that is a little different from anything she has recently done before the cameras. Franchot Tone and Robert Young are her two leading men, with Billie Burke, Reginald Owen and Lynn Carver leading the support—and very excellent support it is.

'Annapolis Salute' Plus Six Acts Scores With Friday Audience.

"ANNAPOLIS SALUTE." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Christy Cabanne, adapted to the screen by John Twist, featuring James Ellison, Marsha Hunt and Van Heflin, with Harry Carey, Ann Hovey, Arthur Lake, Dick Hogan, Marilyn Vernon and John Grigos. Directed by Christy Cabanne. Reviewed at the Earle Theater Friday afternoon.

Without laying any serious claims to greatness in story structure, stellar names or purpose, beyond that of simple entertainment, this latest addition to the long list of service pictures embraces such a buoyant youthfulness, such utter naturalness and so accurate a reflection of life at the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis that it cannot be dismissed as "just another Navy picture." It is a thorough-going job of expert, if unpretentious, craftsmanship.

The serio-comic story revolves about the academy careers of two lads from widely different stations in life—one the son of a long-term petty officer, determined on a career in the Nation's "first line of defense"; the other, the son of a wealthy father who is enrolled for no better reason than that his dad wanted him to be. They have the inevitable clash over "the girl," a sister of another middie with a fine flair for doing the wrong thing at the wrong time and undertaking the thankless role of "fixer."

Bill Martin becomes so captivated by the many fascinations of Julia Clemens that he is willing to chuck his father, his career and the whole caboodle overboard to marry her and settle down to a meager civilian life. Clarke Parker becomes equally smitten and wishes Bill to remain in the service for purposes of his own romantic advancement in the eyes of Julia. Tex Clemens dabbles in and out of the affair continuously, when not too busy dodging the infatuated attentions of Mary Lou, a tiny trick with a wide Southern drawl and the tenacity of a bulldog.

Crash Solves It.

A motor-car smashup that does "Bunny" Oliver no good whatever serves as the means of straightening the whole thing out and absolving Bill from blame for all of the infractions of academy discipline with which he had been charged.

With a background of Annapolis life as it probably is largely lived by the embryo admirals, "Annapolis Salute" is an honest and an engaging picture. It reveals no high flights of "acting," but it does boast a fine integrity and a uniformly high standard of individual performances. James Ellison, Marsha Hunt and Van Heflin, in the principal roles, conduct themselves after the exact fashion of youngsters caught in a mesh of circumstances with which their impulsiveness makes it difficult to cope. Miss Hunt has been one of this department's favorite ingenues ever since her first visit to her parents in Washington and we have greatly liked Van Heflin ever since his superlative performance with Ina Claire and the late Osgood Perkins in "End of Summer," at the National.

Others who give excellent accounts of themselves are Harry Carey, in the role of the senior Martin; Arthur Lake, as the irrepressible Tex Clemens; Marilyn Vernon, as Mary Lou, and Ann Hovey, the cracked-up "Bunny" Oliver. Christy Cabanne's direction of his own story is sane and well paced, and the photography, if anything, flatters the academy by lending its dress parades and other activities more than their customary clarity and picturesqueness.

Six Acts on Stage.

As if mistakenly underestimating the worth of its screen feature, the Earle this week offers a considerably expanded vaudeville bill. It is headlined by that veteran team of comics, Shaw & Lee, standbys of the old two-a-day, who never have been funnier. Masters of the tricky art of timing, these two laugh this reviewer into his favorite sideaches. On the same plane with these stars are Josephine Huston, soprano, and Boy Foy, probably most adept of the stage's jugglers, since he performs all of his amazing feats of equilibrium and muscular co-ordination while whipping around the rostrum on a unicycle—one of his stable being at least 8 feet high! Miss Huston lays herself liable only to the charge of too great an economy in encores.

The bill is opened by Fayne and Foster in a musical novelty and also includes Beatrice Howell in impersonations, the best of which seemed to me to be her carbon copy of Barbara Stanwyck, and Saul Grauman and his sprightly young dancers in his familiar musical stairway novelty.

Trans-Lux

That Chicago speech of President Roosevelt's makes great grinding for the movie news cameras. Trans-Lux this week elevates Mr. Roosevelt into the international spotlight, tying him right in with the double war front, linking him with shots of Britain's foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, the bombing planes in China and Il Duce's son, who has joined the Franco forces in Spain.

Second place goes to the World Series opener, with football getting hardly a look-in, what with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor taking the Paris spotlight, with the definite announcement that they will visit America soon. King Christian of Denmark has a newsreel birthday and Mr. Green and Mr. Lewis, labor's rivals, scowl at each other.

The Trans-Lux does a second excellent job of using one set of shots to emphasize another—J. Edgar Hoover, in close-up, tells the criminals he means business as the camera catches more than a glimpse of Max Silverman being taken into custody, the last of the big-money racketeers. And then, as a fillip, the G-men shorpshooters get their day at fancy firing at the Marine rifle range.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 8.—Idol Chatter: Wonder when—and if—Charles Buddy Rogers will outgrow those college-boy mannerisms? The Brown Derby Restaurant receives more fan mail than many stars. One-word description of Gary Cooper's leading lady in "Souls at Sea:" Dee-lightful. George Murphy still carries a membership card in the United Mine Workers Union; he once swung a pick for a living and is proud of it. Those flowing chiffon dresses you see on the screen flow because a prop man with an air hose is standing just out of camera range.

BUDDY ROGERS.

Errol Flynn's vow that no woman would ever board his new yacht survived Lili Damita's return from France by about three hours. Hollywood's real blonde menace: Shirley Temple—still the No. 1 box office favorite. With a world's champ for a husband, Lupe Velez still lacks a lot of being a good swimmer. Inconsistencies of Flickerville: Francis Lederer, president of an international pacifist organization, is financing a prize-fighter's career. The honest sweat you see on the hero's forehead is not honest at all—it is two-thirds witch-hazel and one-third glycerin.

If Lee Tracy's hands were tied, he would be practically speechless, Hollywood's hobby-horsemen: Cecil B. DeMille, collector of antique firearms and swords. Carole Lombard is very proud of her library of rare tomes—but I have yet to catch her reading anything heavier than magazine fiction. No love lost: Dick Powell and Marion Davies. The screen's least athletic lady: Kay Francis—what a fuss she makes unless the sets for her pictures are built on the stage nearest her dressing room.

Set-watched Barbara Stanwyck this afternoon and witnessed one of the typical gestures which have made her the favorite personage of the hired help. She started to walk off the stage, tripped on a loose cable and saved herself a bad fall by desperately clutching a light standard. Loose cables on a studio set are as inexcusable as loose rope ends on a battleship, and the young electrician who was responsible had visions of a job lost. He rushed to Barbara's aid, but before he could reach her she had regained her balance, picked up the cable, coiled it as neatly as a professional and hung it on the lamp where it belonged. The electrician's apologies were interrupted by her laughter—"It's all right," she said, "I belong to the White Rats . . . we can handle cables and lights without a union' card."

Visited the set where "In Old Chicago" is being filmed and found Don Ameche, whose role in that picture is finished, spending a postman's holiday there as host and guide to a visiting clergyman. Don is always courteous, but in the case of this particular visitor, whom he introduced to everyone, from the director to the lowliest grip as "My best friend, Father Maurice Sheehy," he was so anxious to display the wonders of movie-making that everyone's curiosity was aroused.

After the priest had left, I asked Don for an explanation. "Nothing's too good for Father Sheehy," he explained. "He introduced me to my wife and officated at our wedding." And there is a refreshing viewpoint for a Hollywood star, most of whom would rather entertain the judges who pronounced their first divorce decrees.

Years ago, when Mervyn LeRoy, now an ace director, was playing in a vaudeville act called "Two Boys and a Piano," he landed in a little Western town without a nickel in his jeans. He and his partner staged their act for the town's one theater owner and were offered a spot on his bill. They expected $10—$15 at most—and received, to their amazement, $61. Today in every picture he makes Mervyn LeRoy manages to use that number. Maybe you will hear it as part of a telephone number, or see it on an auto license plate; perhaps it will be cleverly hidden in a line of dialogue. But always that lucky 61 is there.

New York, October 8.

SAMUEL GOLDWYN recently wished to sign a musician to rival Stokowski's Hollywood fame and was most secretive about the negotiations. To a group at a dinner table he finally confided that he already had selected the man, but that now it was a question of salary . . . "Who is he?" the producer was asked. "What's his name?" . . . "I can't tell you yet," Goldwyn answered. "It's a big secret." . . . "Well, then," he was urged, "just tell us his initials. Just his initials." . . . "Just his initials?" the producer repeated . . . The others nodded . . . Goldwyn leaned forward—and whispered: "Jascha Heifetz!"

GEORGE WASHINGTON BEATS W. VA. WESLEYAN, 18-13

*X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1937 17

This Morning

Giants Not Shut Out; Any Ticket Goes.

By Shirley Povich.

New York, Oct. 8.—The best thing that can be said about the Giants in this World Series is that today's was the third straight game in which the Giants have not been shut out.

Would it be too trite to observe that Schumacher did not stick to the last today? Hal, you know, was batted out at the end of the sixth.

POVICH.

To the fans who have had their fill of the one-sided baseball that has been played in the first three games, it would be all right if Manager Joe McCarthy and Manager Bill Terry staged a wrestling match to decide tomorrow's winner.

The guy who named this the nickel World Series was not quite correct. The Giants haven't played 5-cents' worth of baseball since the thing started three days ago.

With the Yankees now leading games to none, they say you can write your own ticket in the betting shops downtown, if you are a Giant rooter. If I were a Giant rooter, they could make my ticket read: "To Washington, D. C."

A terrific argument was raging in the press box all afternoon. The boys couldn't get together on what was the softest job in the world—being the Yankee manager or being a Yankee pinch hitter.

If they are looking for some way to arrange a handicap for the Yankees in this World Series they might shoot DiMaggio, Lazzeri and Selkirk and then make the Giants an even money bet by permitting Bill Terry to manage the Yankees.

Giant die-hards may be still clinging to the hope that Terry's team can win four straight games and take the series, but as the Hollywood producer would say: "As far as I'm concerned, include me out."

Left Fielder Joe Moore, of the Giants, played Bill Dickey's triple in the fifth today as if he were something to be avoided—like black death, with leprosy running interference. The ball finally caught up with Moore, however, and Dickey was held to a three-bagger.

As a confirmed American Leaguer, who never did cotton to National League baseball, I am constrained to observe that the giants are proving in this World Series that they are a good National League ball team.

For a time when Pearson was pitching no-hit baseball for the Yankees today, Giant fans were calling a 3-and-1 count on the hitter a batting rally. The only way the Giants apparently could hope to score was on a base on balls, a wild pitch and two balks.

If anybody is insisting on establishing the goat of this World Series, let's have no more argument. Just turn to a group picture of the Giants.

The guy who called First Baseman Johnny McCarthy, of the Giants, a stumblebum when McCarthy made two errors on a ball hit by Selkirk today, was only half correct. McCarthy did not stumble.

It was getting so, late in the game, that Jimmy Ripple's lousy throwing was not even causing a ripple of surprise. A half-decent throw by Ripple would have, though.

When Mel Ott singled in the ninth, it was "N'ott's so good" or 'not so good, depending on whether you were a Giant or a Yankee rooter.

I know—that's probably what you're saying about the last paragraph. But if you were as cold as I am and had a hangnail on your typing finger, you wouldn't be so particular either.

In fact, there's no sense carrying this thing any further down the column. Do you think that it has been fun for me, either? Or maybe you haven't followed me this far, in which case I am not surprised.

Hadley Gets Mound Call For Yanks

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Polo Grounds, New York, Oct. 8.—"King Carl" Hubbell, his royal purple tainted by the dust of his first World Series defeat, will straighten his battered crown tomorrow and climb the mound in his own ball park to salvage something from the shambles that is now America's baseball classic.

His pitching opponent will be Irving (Bump) Hadley, a right-hander, who gained a decision over the Giants in last year's series. Hadley's nomination by Manager Joe McCarthy was somewhat of a surprise. It was believed the Yankees would shoot with their ace southpaw, Lefty Gomez, in quest of another clean sweep. But the world champions evidently believe they have their neighbors so badly on the run that it doesn't make much difference now who starts.

The Yankee calculations and confidence may prove thoroughly justified, for there has been no evidence thus far that the Giants have either the offense or defense to cope with the Bronx bombers in a series that has been disappointingly one-sided from the outset.

Seek Fourth "Slam."

If they make it four straight tomorrow at Hubbell's expense, the Yankees will score their fourth "grand slam." They whipped the Pirates in 1927, Cardinals in 1928, and Cubs in 1932 without the loss of a single game.

Schumacher's wildness contributed to his own undoing today as the sinker-ball expert failed in a brave effort to duplicate his sensational victory over the Yankees in the fifth game of the 1936 series. There were men on base in all six innings that Schumacher pitched, before giving way to a pinch hitter, but, with better support, he might have extricated himself from some of his difficulties.

The Giant right-hander escaped without being scored on in the first inning, despite a pass to the first man up, Frankie Crosetti, and a two-base wild pitch, but a walk to George Selkirk set up the first Yankee run i. the second inning. Singles by Myril Hoag and Tony Lazzeri brought Crosetti home. Pearson walked to fill the bases, but Schumacher got the side out without further damage.

Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey got the range in the third but erratic outfielding the Giants helped out Schumacher in a hole. Gehrig got an extra base on his single against the rightfield wall when Ripple threw to the wrong base. Lou was midway between first and second, but Ripple threw to first and the Yankee iron man scampered to the keystone bag. Dickey then drilled the ball against the left-field wall. Moore tried for the catch, missed and was not in position to handle the rebound. It went for a three-bagger, scoring Gehrig. George Selkirk's single tallied Dickey but again Schumacher braced himself and kept the roof from caving in.

Rolfe Gets Two Bagger.

With one down in the fourth, Red Rolfe stole a two-bagger on a base-hit to right. It was an ordinary single but Rolfe gambled on a dash to second and made it easily as Ripple threw wide. DiMaggio beat out an infield hit and Rolfe scored on Gehrig's fly to Moore.

This was Gehrig's first run batted in during the series, but it gave him a tie with Babe Ruth for the all-time total at 33. Ruth's record was set in nine post-season engagements while Gehrig has equalled it in six, with a chance to grab the mark exclusively before the current activities subside.

The climax comedy of errors came in the fifth. Selkirk, first up, grounded to McCarthy, who not only fumbled the ball but then tossed wildly to Schumacher in a futile attempt to catch the runner. Selkirk sped to second and McCarthy was charged with a double-error. Hoag dropped a single into center and when Chiozza fumbled the ball for an error Selkirk scampered home after a hesitation start.

Schumacher gave way to a pinch-batsman, Wally Berger, who struck out, in the sixth and gangling Cliff Melton went to the box for the second straight day. The rookie southpaw of the Giants, knocked out in the fifth frame of yesterday's game, held the Yankees hitless for two innings before also giving way to a pinch-hitter.

A two-base wild throw by Melton on Hoag's grounder in the seventh put the towering southpaw in a hole, but he was extricated by a Whitehead-Bartell-McCarthy double-play after walking Tony Lazzeri intentionally.

The Yankee bullpen went into activity at the start of the ninth as Dick Bartell, first up, chased DiMaggio to deep left-center for a hard drive. Ott poked a single to left but was forced at second when Crosetti scooped up Ripple's slow hopper and stepped on the bag. There was a double-play in sight, but Crosetti threw the ball into the dirt, forcing Gehrig to make a difficult block to keep Ripple from gaining an extra base.

Pearson's loss of control was as sudden as it was complete. He didn't come close to the plate with eight straight pitches to McCarthy and Chiozza. With the bases jammed, the crowd yelled for Danning to come through. They had memories of such Giant comebacks as the five-run rally in the ninth that turned the tide against the Cubs here last August. But Danning, handicapped by a painfully swollen right hand, didn't have much chance against the brilliant relief work of Murphy. The catcher swung once and missed, fouled the next pitch into the backstop and then lifted weakly to DiMaggio.

Safe on a wild throw. After rapping a single to center in the fifth inning, Hoag, Yankee fielder, took a long lead off and might have been snagged off base had not Catcher Danning's throw to McCarthy (on the ground) been wild. Hoag is regaining the bag.

Phillips on the Series

By H. I. Phillips.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

Polo Grounds, Oct. 8.—The Giants are in the same position at the present moment as former King Alfonso, Tammany Hall, Wilhelm Derr Grosse, the Cherry sisters and the kerosene lamp.

They have as much chance to come back as the horse and buggy days.

They do everything wrong, including ninth inning rallies.

The first really dramatic moment, the first punch scene in the series came in today's game when Mr. Stoneham's boys staged a ninth inning rally, filling the bases and providing a chance to tie the score. But they did it with two out and with no follow-through with their woods.

And with Harry Danning in a spot where he could have taken his place in history as the unforgotten man-Cuso, he sent up a weak fly, breaking the heart of the most loyal Giant rooters and leaving his team in a worse spot than the Republican Party.

As the Yanks have taken three straight and only need four to take the big money it looks as if the National Leaguers were slightly stymied.

In the first two encounters the Giants look pretty thoroughly outclassed but today they acted as if they were trying to get on a Maj. Bowes amateur night.

They were back among their friends and relatives on their home grounds south of the Wang-Poo, but they were as jittery as Eliza during her first 15 minutes off the ice cakes. Like the Harriet Beecher Stowe lady, they could still feel the snow in their faces and were afraid the bloodhounds would still get the scent.

You can get an idea of the loose finger work by the fact one of the Giants got charged with two errors on the same play. That's an all time record in even the married versus the single men's league.

But don't step on a man when he is down. Be a gentleman and admit that the Giants got their daily quota of one run.

They got off a little better than in the earlier games, the score being only 5 to 1. This was because the Yanks, at the suggestion of the Humane Society, practically skipped the sixth inning. Under the rules they couldn't leave it out, but they practically sat it out.

There were more vacant seats today than ever in the history of a World Series. You can get an idea of the public attitude toward unnecessary brutality from the fact

Patty Berg to Meet Mrs. Page for Title

By Kenneth Gregory,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 8.—Two of America's familiar fairway campaigners, youthful Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, and Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Greensboro, N. C., entered the finals of the 1937 Women's National Golf championship today.

The freckled-faced Minnesotan triumphed in the semifinals with all the ease and grace of a champion, while Mrs. Page displayed iron nerve in rallying to a spectacular victory. They will stage a 36-hole battle tomorrow over the Memphis Country Club course to decide whether the big cup that goes with the title shall be shipped to the Middle West or stay in the Southland for the first time since Alexa Stirling, of Atlanta, won it in 1920.

The red-headed Berg, runnerup in 1935 to Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, on her home course of Interlachen, moved into the championship picture for the second time by overwhelming Mrs. Gregg Lifur, former California champion from the Pacific Palisades, 7 and 6.

Although she has played great golf to win the qualifying medal in the national championship for the last two years, this is the first time Mrs. Page has reached the finals. She was defeated last year in the third round by Beatrice Barrett, of Minnetonka Beach, Minn. Miss Berg also lost in the third round a year ago at Canoe Brook.

The gallery of close to 1,000 saw the North Carolina star stage a remarkable comeback to beat Miss Hemphill, a semifinalist last year. Miss Hemphill was 2 up through the fifteenth hole. The 29-year-old Mrs. Page rammed down a 20-foot putt on the sixteenth for a birdie deuce and evened the match with a nicely placed par on the eighteenth, where Miss Hemphill's approach fell into a bunker.

Miss Hemphill's chances faded on the first extra hole, where she hooked her approach and took 3 to reach the green. Mrs. Page was short with her second, but pitched the ball 2 feet from the cup for a birdie and triumph.

Mrs. Lifur's shots continued to fail her and Miss Berg won the next three holes to end the proceedings.

Cubs Win, Take City Series Lead

By William Weekes.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Thornton Lee, a tall southpaw held largely responsible for the quaint impression that the New York Yankees couldn't hit left-handed pitching, looked like just another country thrower to the Cubs today as the National Leaguers whipped the White Sox, 4 to 1, to go one up in their Chicago City series struggle at Wrigley Field, before 10,658 fans.

Lee, who whipped the Yankees five straight times during the regular American League campaign before they finally licked him, suffered all the damage from Cubs' bats in the third contest of the internecine warfare, while his portside opponent, Larry French, muffled Cox bats with four hits, one of them a disputed home run by Jackie Hayes.

The Cubs, in winning their second triumph in three games, started to work on Lee with a vehemence. Stan Hack, Frank Demaree, Gabby Hartnett and Phil Cavarretta nicked him for singles in the first inning, but a line drive by Billy Hermann after Hack's hit, was converted into a double play by Zeke Bonura.

Vic Sampson Star In Colonial Victory

Speedy 158-Pound Back Scores Two Touchdowns and Tosses 12-Yard Pass for Other Tally; Visitors Take Early Lead on Recovered Fumble.

By Bob Garrison.

Vic Sampson, the 158-pound 1937 version of his Biblical namesake, pulled a strong man act last night to give a group of Methodist football players from West Virginia Wesleyan University and 10,000 persons who gathered at Griffith Stadium an idea of just how powerful that bushy-haired character must have been, when he led the George Washington University eleven to an 18-13 victory.

Leading the Colonials to an impressive decision over the Hill Billies, who proved to be a team of opportunists who never failed to hear opportunity knocking, little Sampson treated the spectators to two of the prettiest touchdowns seen in Griffith Stadium since the day when Tuffy Leemans was making them.

After Wesleyan had converted a fumble by Joey Kaufman into the first score of the game early in the second period, taking a 6-0 lead, Vic, who jumps about like a pogo stick, tied the score in three plays. With the Colonials on the 50-yard line, following the kickoff, this is what the Watseka, Ill., hero did:

Races Dozen Yards.

He raced around left end for a dozen yards and then heaved a pass that was as true as Sue into the hands of Bruce Mahan to place the ball on the 12-yard line. Then came one of his two plays of the night that will stand out in local 1937 football history.

As he faded back to the right, he halted, and spun to the left, at the same time firing a white bomb diagonally across the field. It appeared as though he was attempting to clear the rightfield wall, or at least the student cheering section, so herculean was the heave.

But, fooled as were the Bobcats, so were the 10,000 pairs of eyes. For when the trajectory of the ball was completed, Jay Turner, blond back, was clutching the ball in the end zone, 20 yards from the nearest bewildered opponent. It was the ancient sleeper play performed to perfection.

This was the signal for the Colonials to go to work. The Bobcats, who had given George Washington the most dismal period since his winter at Valley Forge in the opening quarter, were through.

The Colonials didn't score again in the first half, but on spread plays, Vic, Elmore Borden, his substitute, and Mahan ripped off several long gains while the Wesleyan boys were punting and punting. Kicks by Bill Coleman that traveled on the average of 48 yards represented the most effective punting seen in the stadium this season, pro ball et al.

The first of two more touchdowns that were to be scored by the elusive Mr. Sampson came on the second play of the third quarter.

Races 39 Yards to Score.

Through the middle of the line went a ball carrier. It was Sampson again, remember? He was through the line and up to the midfield stripe before he was discov-

Undefeated Grid Elevens Meet Major Tests in Today's Schedule

East's Card Heavy With Good Games

By Henry Super,
United Press Staff Writer.

New York, Oct. 8.—The 1937 football campaign—off to a flying start last week with the defeat of Minnesota—rolls into high gear tomorrow with headline intersectional games and clashes involving undefeated elevens featuring the program.

In the East, where Cornell's lopsided victory over Colgate has been the season's only major development, the competition finally catches up with the rest of the country. Four intersectional games and six involving undefeated, untied opponents give the Atlantic seaboard one of the best programs of the day.

THE PROGRAM BY SECTIONS.

East.

Columbia and Army meet their first tests, risking their perfect records against each other at West Point. Other games involving perfect-record teams are Yale-Pennsylvania, Harvard-Brown, Holy Cross-Georgetown and Pittsburgh-Duquesne. Cornell, right now rated as one of the land's top elevens, faces undefeated Princeton at Princeton and is favored to score its third straight triumph.

Intersectional games pair N. Y. U.-North Carolina, Manhattan-Michigan State, Villanova-Auburn and Temple-Florida (on Friday). Fordham, which launches its suicide schedule next week against Pittsburgh, has a set-up in Waynesburg. Navy plays Virginia and Dartmouth meets Springfield.

Midwest.

Conference competition gets under way in earnest with three games scheduled in the Big Ten and two in the Big Six. In the "ten" Minnesota, angered at its defeat by Nebraska, is expected to crush Indiana. Michigan meets the defending champion, Northwestern, and Wisconsin plays Chicago. Ohio State, which leads the division with one victory and no defeats, plays Southern California on the Coast. Outside the Big Ten, there are several interesting games. Notre Dame plays Illinois. Carnegie Tech meets Purdue in an intersectional. Southern Methodist invades Washington U. of St. Louis, and Detroit played host to Texas Tech last night.

Nebraska plays Iowa State in the Big Six—and Missouri meets Kansas State. Outside, Oklahoma plays Texas and Kansas meets Wichita.

South.

Duke and Tennessee play the top game of the sector, with the betting even. Duke leads the Southern Conference with two victories and no defeats and may find itself tied with V. M. I. V. M. I., which has won one and lost nothing, meets Davidson in one of three conference games. The other games in the division pair V. P. I.-William and Mary, and Furman-North Carolina State. Only one game is scheduled in the Southeastern Conference—Georgia Tech-Kentucky. The winner can move into a four-way tie for the lead with Alabama, Vanderbilt and Louisiana State, all of which have won one each. Outside the conference, Alabama meets South Carolina, Georgia plays Clemson, and Tulane plays Mississippi College.

Southwest.

Intersectional games feature the program. Only conference game is Arkansas-Baylor. Winner can take the lead for T. C. U. and Arkansas are in the conference standings with a tie each, scored last week when they opposed each other. Tulsa meets T. C. U., Texas A. and M. meets Mississippi State, and Rice plays Louisiana. Texas and S. M. U. journey outside the division for their competition.

Rocky Mountain.

Two conference games scheduled tonight—Denver U.-Colorado State and Montana State-Greeley. Three on tap tomorrow—Utah-State-Colorado U., Colorado College-Wyoming, and Colorado Mines-Western State. Utah State leads with two victories and no defeats. Denver U. and Western State each have won one and lost none.

Pacific Coast.

U. S. C.-Ohio State intersectional, in which Ohio State is favored, overshadows other conference games. U. C. L. A.-Washington, Washington State and California are tied with a victory each and the betting favors Washington, California and U. C. L. A. winning tomorrow and remaining deadlocked.

Yankees Rout Jittery Giants, 5-1; Schumacher Driven From Mound

won a notable ten-inning victory against the Yankees last year, but Schumacher, with no encouragement from his colleagues, was a beaten pitcher as early as the third inning.

Yankees Score Early.

Today, the Yankees, whose habit it has been in this World Series to start proceedings no earlier than the fifth inning, didn't tarry.

It was a nine-hit attack that the Yankees unleashed today and again they triumphed without the use of their favorite weapon—the home run. A triple off the leftfield wall by Bill Dickey was their most authoritative blow, but they were hitting safely all down the line, with only Crosetti and Pearson going hitless.

Those nine hits they packed into the first six innings when Schumacher was on the mound. Cliff Melton, their victim of the day before, appeared as a relief pitcher in the seventh and eighth and Don Brennan, like Melton, held the Yankees hitless in the ninth.

But the Giants did produce a final thrill for the 37,385—in the ninth when they filled the bases with two out and set the stage for a story-book finish that would tie the score. But they could only set the stage. They could not see it through.

Mel Ott had singled to left for the fifth and final Giant hit of the game, in that ninth and with two out, the rapidly tiring Pearson lost the niceties in his control and issued his only two walks of the game—to Johnny McCarthy and Lou Chiozza. Harry Danning was next at bat and the possibilities were intriguing, to say the least.

Because in that spot, the Giants could have chosen no greater opportunist than the big-beaked catcher who all season was a Giant valiant with his timely home runs. And in this crisis, a home run with the bases full would stave off defeat, perhaps lead to victory.

That last-ditch threat called for the Yankees' first pitching change of the series. Lantern-jawed Johnny Murphy came in to relieve the fading Pearson. Danning rubbed his hands in the dirt, planted his feet in the batters' box.

From Danning, it was too much to ask. Viciously he missed his first swing at Murphy's pitching. Murphy's second pitch he fouled off. A third straight swing lofted a tame fly to centerfielder Joe Di Maggio, who caught the ball and broke for the centerfield dressing rooms, the game over.

All afternoon, the Yankees had been making chumps out of the Giants. The last measure of ignominy was heaped on the National Leaguers when First Baseman John McCarthy committed two errors on the same play. Centerfielder Lou Chiozza checked in with a damaging fumble and Pitcher Cliff Melton made an absurdly wild throw. Three errors of omission were also committed by the Giants.

Lazzeri Scores Selkirk.

The ancient Tony Lazzeri who has worked up a fine case of rejuvenation in this series, drove in the first Yankee run of the game after Selkirk drew a walk from Schumacher in the second inning and Hoag had singled to left. Lazzeri scored Selkirk from second with a single into center and it appeared like a big inning for the Yanks when Pearson drew a walk to fill the bases. But the damage was limited to one run when Mel Ott snatched up Crosetti's hot smash and forced Hoag at the plate.

The first sign of the Giants' abject futility occurred in the next inning when Lou Gehrig singled to rightfield, started toward second, and drew a throw from Rightfielder Jimmy Ripple, who stupidly threw the ball to first, whereupon Gehrig raced into second unmolested.

And then Leftfielder Joe Moore played Bill Dickey's triple off the leftfield wall as if it was something to be avoided. He succeeded in misjudging the angle so completely that Gehrig scored and the slow-footed Dickey was able to take three bases. Selkirk promptly scored Dickey with a single to right for the third Yankee run.

The Yankee run in the fourth was a dismal affair for the Giants. Red Rolfe hit a routine single into rightfield and for no reason at all kept running to second—an insulting gesture, what with Ripple fielding the ball in short right center. It was a fine contempt that Rolfe was showing for Ripple's throwing arm, but it was a deserved contempt, because Ripple's weak throw pulled Bartell far off the bag and Rolfe slid in safely. DiMaggio moved Rolfe to third by beating out a hit to Ott and Gehrig moved him home with a fly to Chiozza.

But in the sixth, when the Yankees scored their final run to boost their lead to 5-0, the Giants were even more pathetic. Selkirk hit a grounder to First Baseman McCarthy who seemingly wasn't content with one bad piece of work. First he fumbled the ball unforgivably, and then, after picking it up, he made a wild throw to Schumacher at first base, Selkirk dashing to second.

Veterans Vie In Columbia Golf Finals

Miller Stevinson Faces Harvey Johnson, Jr., Today.

Stevinson won 4 and 3 over B. L. Hartz yesterday, while Johnson was turning back the D. C. amateur finalist, Martin F. McCarthy, by a 2 and 1 margin. Johnson was club titleholder in 1935.

Don Kneesi and Commander Platt will face for the second flight crown while finals in all flights and consolations will be played.

First flight—Harvey Johnson defeated Martin McCarthy, 2 and 1; Miller B. Stevinson defeated B. L. Hartz, 4 and 3. Consolation—E. L. Bono defeated Alex Gardiner, 1 up; G. M. Harris defeated Buddy Bowie, 1 up.

Second flight—Don Kneesi defeated A. L. Christman, 1 up; Comm. C. B. Platt defeated E. E. Krewson, 2 and 1. Consolation—Dr. Bradshaw defeated A. S. Gardiner, jr., 1 up; E. C. Gott defeated O. P. Vogel, 3 and 2.

Third flight—J. T. Sherrier defeated W. B. Jarvis and H. E. Olds defeated D. R. Elmore, 1 up, 20 holes. Consolation—D. Falek defeated F. E. Gantz, 4 and 3; Col. E. R. West defeated Joe Trew, 1 up.

Fourth flight—Howard Parrish defeated John Evans, 4 and 3; Bond Geddess defeated Dr. F. M. Hand, 2 and 1. Consolation—E. P. Wilson defeated John L. Quinn, 5 and 4; M. B. Swanson defeated A. C. Ames, 1 up.

Fifth flight—W. A. Rogers defeated E. W. McLachlen, 1 up, 19 holes; R. A. Bogley defeated A. W. Wilson, 1 up. Consolation—F. C. Rita defeated J. R. Boyd, 3 and 4. R. W. Davis defeated John Hardins, 3 and 2.

Sixth flight—W. C. Stockell defeated E. W. Dowd by default. Scott Offutt defeated P. D. Sleeper, 1 up. Consolation—A. M. Palmer defeated Col. J. Hawley, by default. C. M. Charest defeated Carter Field, 1 up, 19 holes.

Seventh flight—H. E. Burton defeated N. T. Peters, 5 and 3; C. Fisher defeated Capt. Shaw, 3 and 2. Consolation—E. Dougherty defeated J. A. Butt, 2 up. Dr. D. J. Fitzsibbons defeated A. H. Moran, 5 and 4.

Eighth flight—B. G. Simpich defeated A. V. Leech, 1 up; Dr. Goodman defeated H. C. Phelps, 1 up. Consolation—W. C. Geleng defeated D. E. McVann, 7 and 6.

ered in the Wesleyan backfield. The rest was easy for him. All he had to do was reverse his field to the right, evade five grasping pair of hands, and streak for the goal line, with two men at his heels, for a 59-yard touchdown dash.

The Colonials missed the try for point again, but when Vic (honest) started ripping off 10-yard end runs a little later in the period and then heaved a long one to Bruce Mahan, the Colonials moved the ball from the 50-yard line to the 12, as Mahan shimmied through after receiving the pass.

On the next play Sampson failed, tch, tch, to find Yurwitz in the end zone with a pass. But, listen, he scored on the next play by trotting leisurely around left end.

While the little Junior was doing all this, the Bobcats, injury plagued and score-punchy, had converted two breaks into scores.

Ciccione Recovers Fumble.

Bill Ciccione, a clever guard, recovered Joey Kaufman's fumble of a punt in the first period that brought the first score, when Red Mackey passed to Joe Gilmore over Kaufman's head into the end zone from the 12-yard line.

And, again, in the last period Ciccione fell on a loose ball when Borden's punt from the goal line was blocked by George Mike, tackle, and plopped on by the wide-awake visitor on the 1-yard line. G. W.'s line made it tough for the Methodists, but on the fourth down Mackey swept right end and cut in for the score.

They converted to make it 18-13, but it was all over but the shouting—for Sampson. When he was injured near the end of the game and forced to leave he was given a tremendous ovation by the appreciative ladies and gentlemen in the stands, who believed that Mr. Jim Pixlee, who has been afraid Sampson is not strong enough to play a whole game, hasn't got something there.

Golf Champs Crowned at Two Clubs

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Congressional and Kenwood crowned women's club champions yesterday as "Women's Club Championship Week" moved into its final stages. Mrs. J. R. Rhyne, defending titleholder and medalist, won 6 and 5 over Mrs. J. J. McCarthy at Congressional, while Mrs. A. A. McEntee upset Mrs. J. D. Dale in another endurance match at Kenwood on the twenty-first hole.

Mrs. Rhyne completed her sweep of the Congressional title for the second consecutive year, bucking a high wind over the suburban course to win by the decisive 6-and-5 margin in the final round contest. Mrs. McNitt, Mrs. Davy and Mrs. Welte were other prize winners in various flights.

Playing in her second extra-hole match in two days and the third in the tourney, Mrs. McEntee proved her liking for the overtime encounters by winning on the third extra hole over Medalist Mrs. Dale at Kenwood. Mrs. Joyce, Mrs. Hoad and Mrs. DeLaMater shared in the trophies. Mrs. McEntee receives the cup donated by Dr. and Mrs. Pomeroy.

Mrs. A. A. McEntee Wins Kenwood Tournament

Mrs. A. A. McEntee won the Kenwood Golf and Country Club women's golf championship yesterday by defeating Mrs. J. C. Dale on the twenty-first hole in the final match.

Mrs. Stevens De La Mater took the consolation prize in the first flight by her 4 and 3 victory over Mrs. R. C. Miller.

Mrs. Mary Hoad beat Mrs. Charles Meade, 3 and 1, to take top honors in the second flight while the second flight consolation match was won by Mrs. R. E. Joyce who conquered Mrs. Marvin Johnston, 2 and 1.

Buckeyes in Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Oct. 8.—The Ohio State football team, a big, shifty machine bringing the Buckeye colors to the Far West for the first time since 1921, was favored in most quarters tonight to defeat Southern California in their intersectional game tomorrow.

40,000 to See Game.

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 8.—Michigan, showing signs of having regained some of its old power, will take the first crack at Northwestern's Big Ten football championship tomorrow before an expected 40,000 spectators in Dyche Stadium.

Warrenton Show Honors To The Bear

Mrs. John H. Whitney's Horses Dominate Opening Day.

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 8.—Warrenton's annual fall show, Virginia's foremost hunter classic, opened with clear skies and a brisk wind, which kept the spectators shivering despite the sun, as they watched Mrs. John Hay Whitney's entries make what almost amounted to a clean sweep of the hunter classes.

The Bear, a magnificent chestnut gelding from her Llangollen Stables, was high-point winner of the day with ribbons in the model hunter, lightweight green hunters, hunters 4 years and under, and so on. The big fellow's only real competition was from Chatter Chat, owned by Mrs. Ellsworth Augustus and Big John, Holliday Hill's veteran campaigner. Mrs. Augustus has an almost completely new stable.

Her famous chestnut hunt team which offered the Whitney grays so much competition several years ago is broken up, and only the lovely Chatter Chat and Sand Artist remain. Her new horses are showing lots of promise, especially Cornish Hills, a fine-looking chestnut.

Whoopee, a horse which has won many a blue for Clifford Farms, cleaned up in the morning open jumper classes. He was ridden to victory by Mor Clark in the open and the $200 jumper stake. In the triple bar class, Mothball, Hubert Phipps' horse, won the blue. He is a former polo pony.

The Army, from Fort Myer, took the rest of the class. In the international class this same Army won all the ribbons. Sandy, a horse that is pretty familiar to Washington horse show fans, won first, with Capt. Hunrix Luebbermann up.

Roosevelt Beats Wilson; Eastern and St. John's Tie

Riders Win On Belated Score, 6-0

Underrated Cadet Team Surprises Favored Lincoln Parkers.

By Jack Munhall.

Roosevelt High School converted a fourth period break into a touchdown yesterday afternoon at Roosevelt Stadium, and won its first interhigh school series victory since 1927, nipping Woodrow Wilson, 6 to 0.

Some 2,000 fans saw the Rough Riders lash out with furious power to win a game that from the second quarter on had been labeled a scoreless tie.

The break that sent Wilson, making its debut in the series, to defeat came in the form of a fumble. Joe Fraber, husky Rider fullback, sent a booming punt from his own 40-yard line to Al Bernstein standing on the Wilson 19. Just as the President back gathered the ball to his bosom, he was smashed to the earth by Larry Beck, Roosevelt guard, on the 13. Loosened from his arms by impact, the ball bounded crazily until Beck regained his feet and flopped on it on the 11.

At this point Coach Lynn Woodworth, of Roosevelt, sent in two backfield substitutes, Harold Marks and Joe Mundy, neither of whom had yet appeared. The strategy was well-founded, for it was Marks who, three plays later, dove over from the one-half yard stripe to register the score.

Previously Bill Smith and Marks had pushed the leather steadily onward by line plunges until a first down was made on the one-half-yard line.

Laddbush was sent in to convert the point but his placement was wide.

Roosevelt exhibited a fast, tricky team and one which may cause considerable trouble in the series. The blocking was not too good but in Joe Fraber, Bill Hammett and Bill Smith the Rough Riders uncovered a trio of smart, hard-running backs. The line played well on the offense although on the defense it showed many glaring errors, particularly a tendency to be sucked out of position by reverses to the weak side.

Paul Hurdle, lanky end, proved valuable to Wilson's defensive success in the first half when Roosevelt was bottled whenever in scoring territory although it rolled up five first downs.

The first three periods found Roosevelt gaining frequently between its own 35 and the enemy 35, but progressing beyond that latter stripe was difficult, indeed, for the Presidents' line always found enough reserve power to turn back the smashes of Fraber, a really good fullback.

Wilson's most serious threat fizzled on the Roosevelt 25-yard line after an attempted field goal was blocked by Right End Ed Freund. This advance had been made possible by a blocked kick. Fraber's punt from the Roosevelt 35 bounced off the chest of Bob Miller and was pounced on by Angel Correa on the Roosevelt 19.

Here three running plays netted but a gain of 3 yards because Capt. Ed Vasvary, Rough Rider guard, broke through to throw Buck Barbee for a 4-yard loss on the third down. On the following play, Raffe Mesrobian, a tackle, dropped back from his position and tried the place kick which was blocked by the aforementioned Beck.

Statistics give Roosevelt a marked superiority. The Riders were credited with a total of eight first downs, three in the second half, while Wilson was able to accumulate but four, one of which resulted from a 15-yard penalty for a Roosevelt substitute communicating.

St. John's Surprises Eastern Team by Tie

A fatal mistake of starting the second team against the underrated St. John's Prep School eleven placed the Eastern High football players in such a frenzy yesterday that they were fit to be tied and the Johnnies obliged by seeing to it that they were, holding them to a scoreless tie.

Unable to make up for lost ground or to get control of the situation after the Cadets had proved too strong for the second stringers, Eastern High, Interhigh Series leader, battled through four quarters, on its home field in an attempt to make up for lost time and yardage. But by the time the last quarter rolled around, St. John's was on the offensive and Eastern was fortunate to escape defeat.

For a pass from Bill O'Connor, Cadet heaver, that was completed to Joey Gallagher on the Lincoln Parkers' 15-yard line, put the ball near the pay dirt and when he duplicated the trick on the next play, the Vermont Avenue soldiers were on the 8-yard stripe, ready to strike.

The first pass had nearly resulted in a score when Gallagher lateraled to Frank Cady, who was clear to cross the goal line when the pass was ruled a forward and the ball placed on the 15. After reaching the 8, the Eastern line, which showed, impressively in spots, held and averted a touchdown.

Wilson Back Gains 5 Yards Against Roosevelt

Al Bernstein, Presidents' quarterback, broke through tackle and advanced until stopped by Bill Smith, of Roosevelt, in the second period of the game at Roosevelt Stadium yesterday afternoon. Roosevelt won the meeting, 6-0.

Temple Wins From Florida By Conversion

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Oct. 8.—Driving 64 yards in three plays in the third period, Temple came from behind tonight to score a 7-to-6 victory over a stubborn Florida eleven in an intersectional college football game before a crowd of 10,000.

Vinc Renzo, loose-hipped halfback from Long Branch, N. J., started the march by breaking into the open on a double reverse and running 23 yards to the Florida 41. Mike Lukac, of Lansford, Pa., then plunged 11 off tackle on a reverse to the 30.

On the next play Renzo again took the ball, weaved his way through a broken field and raced 30 yards for the tying touchdown.

In two plays Mayberry gained a first down on the Temple 36, then Willis raced around Temple's right end for another first down on the seven. Mayberry smashed off tackle to the one from where Fullback McGhee lunged for the score. McGhee's try for the extra point was blocked.

Gonzaga Prep Eleven Whips Loyola High School by 12 to 3

Baltimore, October 8.—Orrel Mitchell's invading Gonzaga Prep eleven from Washington, D. C., staged a great second-half rally here this afternoon to defeat Loyola High School, 12-3, in a hard-fought contest.

The host team took an early lead when Right End Kenny booted a field goal from the 15-yard line for a 3-0 advantage. As time wore on this slim margin assumed tremendous proportions for the Purple attack frequently stalled in scoring territory, so fierce was the defensive play of the lighter Loyola line.

However, in the fourth period Gonzaga's fleet backs began to move and, with excellent blocking from Frank Fenwick and Joe McDonald proving a deciding factor, Jim Ellis, Jim Shaw and Louis DiFilipo ripped the Loyola line to shreds. Ellis and Shaw made the touchdowns.

Phillips on Series

even the $1.10 bleachers were not much more than two-thirds full.

They can belittle Babe Ruth's influence at the gate in private conversations if they want to, but no World Series that had his personality in it could ever be as poorly patronized as this, one-sided or not.

They put Melton back in to pitch after Schumacher was taken out today. They had to. Gumbert and Coffman had claimed immunity under the Wagner act.

Well, the Yanks have taken three straight without any more trouble than Mussolini had in taking Selassie's umbrella.

And the big point is this: They haven't started hitting.

Think of it, boys! Three games in a World Series and only one Yankee homer. And only one three-bagger.

Powerful Bullis Ties Washington-Lee, 0-0

Little Generals, Minus Tommy Simpson, Unable to Solve Stiff Defense Offered by Tars; 1,000 See Exciting Game.

A powerful Bullis Prep eleven invaded Virginia yesterday to tackle Washington and Lee High School's Little Generals and the result was a bitterly fought scoreless tie.

Handicapped by the loss of flashy Tommy Simpson, the Virginia eleven that trampled Central last week, 26-6, still had high hopes of a third straight victory over the Future Tars, but the Tars, who held a 28-0 win over Roosevelt last week, couldn't see it that way.

Bullis' only scoring threat came early in the game when King recovered Sprinkle's fumble to go down on W. and L.'s 20-yard marker, and Chet Lee then fumbled but recovered for a 15-yard loss. The W. and L. line held for downs.

Washington-Lee retaliated in the third quarter when Sherry Werner's punt was out on the Virginians' 5-yard stripe. On the next play Homer Sprinkle, a slippery fullback, tore around end to lug the ball on a 65-yard journey into enemy territory to the Bullis' 30. Two penalties carried the leather back 20 yards to midfield. Downs' punt was snagged by Werner, who went down on his own 30-yard line.

Denton then snared a wild Bullis pass tossed by Werner, on the 22-yard marker, and two successive line plunges gained a measly 5 yards to the Bullis' 17. Here another exchange of fumbles ensued, Washington-Lee recovered and King tried a placement from Bullis' 20, but the oval fell short. As the game ended Washington-Lee was hot on another comeback try into Bullis' territory.

Sherry Werner and Chet Lee, a pair of bruising backs, led the Bullis assault, while the Sprinkle to Downs tossing combine bore the brunt of the fray for Washington-Lee.

St. Alban's Defeats Boys' Latin, 13-0

Eric Danielson, elusive quarterback, scored both touchdowns and passed to the extra point yesterday to enable St. Alban's to defeat Boys Latin, of Baltimore, 13 to 0, and maintain its undefeated record, on the St. Alban field.

The scores were both made after sustained drives in the first and second periods. The first started on the Latin 45 and was culminated when Danielson smashed off tackle from the 6-yard line. The second advance began from the Latin 40 and stopped when Danielson lugged the ball over from the 8-yard stripe.

Thread Needle Outruns 7 Competitors to Annex Tuscarora Purse

Speedy Filly Wins Laurel Main Event

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 8.—The only gal in the race, Thread Needle, showed the bottoms of flying hoofs to seven colts and geldings in a mile and a sixteenth race, named the Tuscarora Purse, and occupying the feature position on today's program. Bringing Jockey Basil James, a riding double for the day, the daughter of Reigh Count ran her winning streak to three victories in a row, scoring by two lengths.

Conquer, handled by Bobby Merritt, was second a neck in front of Maeriel, the public choice of the field. Thread Needle was second choice, and brought her supporters a $7.70 mutuel. Her time for the route was 1:46 4-5.

Maeriel was first to show in front, but was taken back to be saved for the stretch test. Thread Needle was hustled along to get to the front, and there she stayed. Knight Warrior made a futile attempt to dislodge her and ran himself into defeat. Conquer, always close, could not threaten seriously. Maeriel closed gamely when placed to a drive, but too late.

Ideal autumn weather greeted the 9,000 customers and the track was fast for the first time this week.

The day brought a $139.70 pay off in the daily double. The lucky ones were those who played Gold Color and Wise Dart.

Today was the day for Alice G., and the filly stepped to the front at once and Jockey Basil James never looked back, winning from Savage Beauty and Alexandrine, the last-named the favorite in the group of nine starters. Alice G. paid $10.20.

Mrs. H. McIlvain's Albuquerque won the eighth race at a $9.30 mutuel. Glittering won second money from Xandra in a camera finish. Sea Gull, $4 favorite, annexed the seventh with ease.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLD COLOR, $17.90, $8.80, $4.00; PAMEIOE, $4.80, $3.30; ANN McGINTY, $7.00.

GOLD COLOR moved up with rush to take lead after opening quarter, drew out and was being restrained at finish. PAMEIOE, probably best, broke tardily and was hard ridden thereafter to gain steadily. ANN McGINTY was forward factor from start, but weakened. LILTING took lead early, but tired.

SECOND RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1,000. The Longwoods Steeplechase. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:05. Off 2:06½. Winner, G. Whitney's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT PLUMAGE, $13.20, $5.40, $4.20; TROJAN RACKET, $7.00, $4.30; SUN SCOUT, $5.00.

BRIGHT PLUMAGE, in hand for first mile, rallied to drive to improve position sharply and caught TROJAN RACKET approaching thirteenth fence to win going away. TROJAN RACKET disposed of BONNIE CHATTER to take lead and closed willingly under punishment. SUN SCOUT fenced in good fashion, but lacked speed on flat. MAENARD lost rider at first fence.

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, FAST.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post 2:38. Off 2:42. Winner, Everglade Stable's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE DART, $6.00, $3.80, $2.30; TUTTICURIO, $4.00, $3.60; SPUR FLOWER, $28.80.

WISE DART, hustled along to get to front going to turn, ran HAPPY HOSTESS and BALLY BAY into defeat and was not menaced thereafter. TUTTICURIO, off well, dropped back and worked way up, but hung in final eighth. SPUR FLOWER came with good speed in final stages. WORKING GIRL faltered after reaching forward position.

DAILY DOUBLE, GOLD COLOR AND WISE DART, PAID $139.70.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:10½. Off 3:13. Winner, Mrs. I. J. Shaefer's b. g. Wheat Prices Tumble Again To New Lows

Heavy Selling Carries Futures 2¼ Cents a Bushel Lower.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Deluged again and again with floods of selling orders, wheat prices tumbled 2¼ cents a bushel maximum today, in addition to yesterday's 5-cent collapse.

All deliveries of wheat here reached new bottom-price records for the season, all under $1 a bushel, and 32¼ cents down from the year's top attained on July 16. Only fractional rallies of wheat prices were witnessed in today's final dealings. Much of the selling that forced the wheat market down came from Eastern sources, and was apparently a liquidating character resulting from breaks in values of securities.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1⅛-1¾ cents lower than yesterday's finish, December 99⅛-⅝, May $1.00⅛-⅜, July 95-95¼. Corn unchanged to ¾ off, December 59¼-⅜, May 60⅝-½, July 61⅛-¼. Oats at ¼ decline, December 29¼, and rye showing ⅝-¾ setback, December 73⅞. Provisions results were unchanged to 50 cents down.

General Motors Sales Ahead of Last Year

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—World sales to dealers by the General Motors Corporation in September were 82,317 cars, compared with 19,288 in September a year ago, and 188,010 in August, it was announced today. Sales for the first nine months of the year totaled 1,594,378 compared with 1,516,092 for the like period of 1936.

Company officials explained the large increase in September this year over last was due to a quicker changeover in construction of new models.

Mr. Maloney listed a total of $284,251,800 in bonds ordered retired or canceled from the bond retirement fund. These bonds include: 4 per cents, $40,716,100; 3 per cents, Series A, $1,710,875; 2¾ per cents, Series B, $35,023,450; 2¼ per cents, Series G, $222,375; 1½ per cents, Series C, $49,796,000; 1¾ per cents, Series D, $49,843,000, and ¼ per cents, Series H, $107,000,000.

Cocoa Board Trading 3 Times Last Year

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Trading on the New York Cocoa Exchange in the fiscal year ended September 30 totaled 145,136 lots, or 1,944,822 tons, a new high record, and nearly three times the 50,936 lots for the preceding year, it was announced today.

Actual deliveries aggregated 1,052,060 bags, also a high record.

Fourth Quarter Trade Likely To Show Drop

But Only Moderately Below Last Year, Survey Reports.

New York, Oct. 8—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"In a broad survey of the opinions of a large number of executives of leading corporations, the outlook for business in the fourth quarter was regarded as generally favorable. Fourth quarter volume will not be up to the optimistic expectations entertained earlier in the year, and there are a number of lines in which production will be under third quarter levels. On the whole, however, aggregate volumes are not likely to be more than moderately below the satisfactory levels attained in the final three months of 1936. During the latter period, industrial production was only 9 per cent below the 1929 average; hence, volumes approaching last year's levels would be regarded as entirely constructive. Prospects are favorable for those companies selling in the farming regions, particularly the mail order and agricultural machinery lines.

"Opinions as to business prospects for 1938 covered a wide range, from timid pessimism to rampant optimism. There were many who expressed complete confidence that the basic trend in the business cycle was still upward and that further and appreciable expansion in volumes would be witnessed next year. A great many optimistic replies were obtained from executives in the automobile industry, who look for an enthusiastic reception of the new models and good sales in 1938.

"The tenor of the replies from those producing and distributing consumers' goods was rather consistently but moderately favorable. The prevailing opinion in these lines is that employment will be at least as high as in 1937 and that wage rates will average higher. Thus, the average consumer will have more to spend. As the rise in cost of living has been checked within the recent past, the threat that living expenses would overtake the advance in incomes has been dissipated."

Bayuk Cigar Sales Set New Record

New York, Oct. 8—According to a statement issued today by A. Joseph Newman, president of Bayuk Cigars, Inc., sales for the quarter ended September 30 were the largest for any quarter in the history of the company.

Five hundred additional operatives have been employed within the last 60 days.

New Financing.

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—New financing for the week ended October 7 amounted to $144,073,476, the largest since the week ended July 1, a compilation by Poor's Publishing Co. showed today.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Decline in Late Attack on Rails and Steels; Wheat and Cotton Lower.

New York, Oct. 8.—Stocks declined again, closing but little above the worst, after two selling waves. Stock turnover was moderate at around 1,200,000 shares. United States bonds were irregular, the majority rising a little before the close. Commodities had another bad day. December wheat dropped 1¾ cents a bushel to 99⅛ cents. Cotton futures dropped $2 a bale on a high crop estimate.

Steel and Rails Hit.

Stocks had two bad periods, without much recovery in between. Opening prices were rather sketchy but after that the tone was steady for a while. Shortly before noon selling of rails, steels and metals took out of the market what little courage it had and prepared the way for a rather heavy fall in leading stocks early in the last hour, at which time the turnover was large enough to send behind the ticker tape. After the market quieted down it continued to show a lack of rallying power, in spite of the abundance of rumors during the day of favorable developments as lower margin requirements, higher freight rates and the like. Most of them probably were received as having been born of wishful listening.

New Lows.

Steel was in the lead of the retreats and it sold behind another marking buoy—$70 a share—for a new low on the movement. Shorts were active in the issue, the market now having degenerated into an affair in which the bears are striving to stampede the market, possibly in the hope of covering instead of merely pursuing a conviction that conditions warrant still lower prices. Most brokers are giving bearish advice, while naturally deploring the fading of prices.

Rail shares suffered and most of them fell into new low ground. As a group they were the most poorly served. Central and Delaware & Hudson fell to new low levels. Others gave up 1 to 2 points. The rail average hit a new low for more than two years.

Commodity Influence.

Stocks probably were affected to some extent by the blows taken one after another in the commodities markets. Metals had their innings of weaknesses a week or so ago, and still are uncertain. Cotton has been declining all summer, and broke badly today. Wheat had a bad fall yesterday, giving up the 5-cent-a-bushel limit for a day's trading and it settled down further today. The drop in cotton, after the Government had given its estimate of condition for October 1, amounted to around $2 a bale. The lowest price set on the first reaction to the high crop estimates was 7.52 cents, paid for January delivery.

New Low Price.

The lowest price that cotton had sold until recently was 4.81 cents, a price paid in June, 1932. That was on the old gold dollar basis. Today's price, on the same basis, was the equivalent of 4.45 cents a period. That, it may be urged, is the net benefit to the South after four or five years of cotton-crop management from Washington, a management that has resulted in permanent loss of much of the world market for Southern cotton and generally in higher prices for consumers.

Futility of Control.

The decline this year has accompanied an unusually large crop. The latest estimate suggests a 17,573,000-bale production. That has been exceeded, and not by much, only once in history, and this year the yield per acre was larger than in the former record year, 1926. The lesson to be learned is that no scheme for acreage control is likely to succeed unless nature also can be controlled, and that in long run if the planter is allowed to be governed by markets he will come nearer to hitting the correct answer than if politics enters in. Schemes for paying doles and bonuses merely destroy markets by keeping prices up and encourage overproduction in spite of safeguards.

The financial side of the day's developments reflected the recent deflation in markets. A sharp decline in brokers' loans, a small rise in commercial loans, an expansion in currency circulation (a seasonal occurrence), an increase of excess reserves against a similar drop in actual reserves, indicating a fall in bank deposits and another addition to the gold stock were reported by the Federal Reserve Board.

Margin Rumor.

The fact that brokers' loans have now sunk below a billion and that the general atmosphere is anything but inflationary, more point is given to current pressure brought to bear upon authorities to give some inflationary stimulus to the markets. Although coming from no highly influential source, more is heard now of cutting further the gold value of the dollar than of lifting it. Moreover, the rumor that the Federal Reserve Board might now be in a mood to consider relaxing its marging requirements on stock market traders gained strength from the arrival here this morning of Chairman Marriner Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, a man who for the past year has been opposing inflationary schemes.

Talking It Up.

Even the pessimists in Wall Street take the view, a cynical one perhaps, that if markets go down far enough and if the business picture becomes cloudy enough, it may be taken for granted that the Administration at least will try to talk things up and to pull something out of the hat calculated to bring about or to stimulate the hope for inflation. Incidentally, it is doubtful if as much good as harm came from a first-page newspaper interview with an anonymous but high official of the Treasury who professed to see only unbounded prosperity ahead. Those statements are beginning to appear too often for comfort.

Margins.

There was a fresh outcropping of rumors of an impending reduction in securities margin requirements today, one of the reports being that at a meeting was being held at the local Reserve Bank. So far as could be learned, there was no such meeting and the report may have been based upon the fact that Chairman Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, was here today en route to Washington, returning from a Western vacation. A meeting to change margin requirements can be held by the board at any time on call of the chairman and Wall Street opinion still expects some easing of the requirements will be announced.

Foreign Deposits.

The fact that foreign central banks, which prefer 90-day Treasury bills for investment of idle cash balances, can get these only at prices which yield around 0.15 per cent explains the large transfer of funds into the Reserve Banks in the week ending Wednesday. Since the Treasury remonetized $300,000,000 of gold and created more competition for issues of its own discount bills, more than $87,000,000 of foreign central bank money has moved into the Reserve Banks, because it could obtain no satisfactory employment elsewhere. About half of the $43,000,000 which moved in this week appeared to come out of local commercial banks, which were more than glad to see the deposits go, since it decreased their deposit insurance costs. Those are based upon total deposits.

Gen. Electric Orders Largest in 8 Years

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—General Electric Co. announced today that orders booked during the third quarter of 1937 amounted to $88,010,937, the largest for any September quarter since 1929. They compared with $77,398,718 in the June quarter and $74,922,441 in the September quarter last year. Orders for the nine months ended September 30 also topped any similar period since 1929 at $305,276,556, against $211,891,038 last year.

Freight Traffic Is 3.4 Per Cent Over Year Ago

Total of 847,245 Cars Loaded Is 12.8 Per Cent Under 1930.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended October 2 totaled 847,245 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 27,648 cars or 3.4 per cent above the corresponding week in 1936, and an increase of 141,271 cars or 20 per cent above the same week in 1935, but a decrease of 124,010 cars or 12.8 per cent below the same week in 1930. Loading of revenue freight for the week of October 2 was an increase of 6,799 cars or eight-tenths of 1 per cent above the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 339,305 cars, an increase of 1,423 cars above the preceding week, and 6,740 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 174,853 cars, an increase of 1,431 cars above the preceding week, and 1,929 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Coal loading amounted to 163,351 cars, an increase of 7,621 cars above the preceding week, and 4,884 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Grain and grain-products loading totaled 36,804 cars, an increase of 585 cars above the preceding week, and 4,935 cars above the corresponding week in 1936. In the western districts alone, grain and grain-products loading for the week of October 2 totaled 25,204 cars, an increase of 484 cars above the preceding week and an increase of 4,486 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Livestock Increases.

Livestock loading amounted to 21,801 cars, an increase of 577 cars above the preceding week, and 1,282 cars above the corresponding week in 1936. In the western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week of October 2 totaled 18,359 cars, an increase of 976 cars above the preceding week, and 1,711 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Ore loading amounted to 62,189 cars, a decrease of 3,536 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 4,324 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Coke loading amounted to 10,347 cars, a decrease of 613 cars below the preceding week, and 269 cars below the corresponding week in 1936.

All districts, except the Allegheny, reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight compared with the corresponding week in 1936. All districts, except the Pocahontas, reported decreases compared with the corresponding week in 1930.

RFC to Refuse Loans Unless Crisis Is Shown

many banks not making an effort to replace RFC capital with private capital.

"Bank capital should not be reduced below a safe and proper ratio to deposits under any circumstances, but with such great recovery as we have had, effort should be made to retire at least a part of this capital, particularly where private funds are available," he said.

Other speakers were J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Treasury; Luther Harr, secretary of banking in Pennsylvania, and Leo Crowley, director of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Cerro de Pasco Votes $1.75 Special

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Directors of Cerro De Pasco Copper Corporation announced today a special dividend of $1.75 and a dividend of $1 on the capital stock, payable November 1 to stock of record October 18.

The company has previously paid dividends of $1 on February 1, May 1 and August 2.

Lanston Monotype.

The board of directors of the Lanston Monotype Co. at its meeting yesterday declared a quarterly dividend of $1 per share on all issues and outstanding capital stock payable November 30 to stockholders of record on November 19.

Boston Stock Broker Suspended by SEC

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission suspended Thomas F. Gagen from the Boston Exchange for a year yesterday and warned all exchanges to weed out persons involved in stock manipulation. Gagen consented to his suspension at the close of an investigation of the capital stock of the East Boston Co. between May 27, 1935, and July 31, 1935. The commission announced that the names of other persons involved in the Gagen case were being referred to various exchanges because "national securities exchanges have it in their power to prevent such abuses. Failure to exercise this measure of self-regulation cannot long be ignored."

Lehman Corp. Assets Decline

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Lehman Corporation, an investment company, reported today net asset value as of September 30 was $36.14 a share, compared with $41.79 as of June 30. Net assets were calculated before taxes and management compensation.

The report disclosed that the portfolio had been reduced considerably, particularly in securities of automobile, rubber, metal and mining, merchandise and rails and rail equipment companies. Some of the issues disposed of included Chrysler, General Motors, Goodrich and Goodyear.

There were also sales of Associated Dry Goods, Allied Stores, Gimbles, National Lead, Atlantic Coast Line, Tide Water Associated Oil, Crucible Steel, National Steel, Youngstown Sheet & Tube and National Cash Register.

Purchases were made in U. S. Rubber, Woolworth, Sears, Roebuck, Union Carbide & Carbon, General Electric, Allied Chemical & Dye and Bethlehem Steel.

Bumper Crop Deflates Cotton To 4-Year Low

Later the Commodity Credit Corporation announced a loan plan up to 9 cents a pound for cotton, and the Agriculture Department promised subsidy payments of $130,000,000 on this year's crop.

But Wallace told reporters yesterday that the loans gave no assurance of a price peg in face of the large yield.

"Loans don't necessarily make the price," he said.

He pointed out that prices dropped to 10½ cents in 1935, despite a loan program inaugurated in the previous year.

The estimated 1937 cotton crop would come within 405,000 bales of the all-time high. The largest crop ever harvested was 17,978,000 bales in 1926. The estimates were nearly 5,000,000 bales higher than the five-year average for 1928-32. The increase over the previous report was the largest ever shown in one month. A month ago, the department said 16,098,000 bales were indicated by conditions prevailing at that time.

Census reports said 8,259,445 running bales were ginned from the crop of 1937 prior to October 1, compared with 6,031,950 for 1936 and 4,232,068 for 1935.

Every State Gains.

Aided by nearly ideal growing conditions and smaller inroads from pests, the increase was general over the cotton belt, every State showing a gain over last year. Texas continued to lead the field, with 5,025,000 bales estimated for 1937, against 2,933,000 last year. A yield of 2,400,000 bales was forecast for Mississippi, compared with 1,911,000 last year. Arkansas estimates were placed at 1,750,000 bales, against 1,295,000 last year, and Georgia, 1,430,000 bales, against 1,086,000 last year. For nearby Virginia, a crop of 40,000 bales was forecast, compared with 33,000 last year.

Steadily declining cotton prices had followed the course of the crop. From 14 cents a pound early this year they had fallen to 12 cents in July, to 10 cents in August, and below the 8-cent line yesterday following the cotton report.

On the New York futures market yesterday, new lows since 1933 were reached, with December delivery closing at 7.89 a pound. The break spread to the cottoseed oil market, which fell to new lows for the season for losses of .26 to .34 of a cent a pound.

Margins Limited.

The Agriculture Department's announcement last night of voluntary margin requirements on the New York Cotton Exchange said the rule requires of all customers initial margins equal to not less than those fixed for clearing members by the New York Cotton Exchange Clearing Association, Inc. When customers' margins are one-half exhausted they must be restored to the initial amount required.

Secretary Wallace explained that the commodity exchange act conferred no authority on the Government to fix margin, and the action had to be voluntary. Although he indicated the New Orleans Cotton Exchange might follow suit, President Charles E. Fenner, of the New Orleans exchange, told the United Press last night he had received no such request from Wallace.

The Agriculture Secretary hailed the New York exchange action as a "constructive step" tending to insure fair competition between commission firms, and to protect the small trader "who might in the absence of substantial margin requirements, be inclined to plunge." He said it would protect the commission houses by prohibiting a firm from "extending an excessive line of credit to a speculative customer to obtain the business."

Prices Slump $2 a Bale.

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—A Government forecast for a crop of 17,573,000 bales, the second largest on record, caused cotton to slump about $2 a bale today. December eased from 7.99 to 7.80 and closed at 7.69, with final prices 28 to 38 points net lower.

The market opened 3 to 6 points lower and fluctuations during the first hour were narrow in evening up operations prior to the crop report. This was about 750,000 to 1,000,000 bales above trade expectations and 1,475,000 bales over the September bureau indication.

D.C. Bandsmen Win Suit for $4,000 Wages

District Must Pay Guard Group Back Pay, City Judge Rules.

Twenty-six members of the District National Guard Band won their fight to secure back pay from the District yesterday when Municipal Court Judge Nathan Cayton held that they were entitled to additional compensation for 1933, 1934 and 1935. Most of the claims arose from parade duty.

Payment of the claims had been disputed by the District government on the theory the bandsmen should have been paid by the Federal Government. Judge Cayton stated "this suit has been properly filed against the District of Columbia and not against the Federal Government."

Bandsmen, together with the amounts they will receive, are: James C. Ireland, $72; Francis J. Govan, $194.60; Frid O. Briggson, $72; Joseph Berst, $72; Eugene F. Gass, $189.40; Everett R. Rose, $64; Otto Hammerbacker, $122; Ralph P. MacConnell, $111.40; Ralph J. Duffie, $194.60; Clyde C. Gaskill, $186.60; Robert R. Rock, $118.20; Arthur C. Fisher, $64.60. Max W. Esberger, $197.40; Walter L. Redfield, $201.40; Leroy Mondereau, $133; Harry H. Meiners, $229.70; Norval D. Guerrier, 197.40.

Andrew M. Smith, $201.40; Tell M. Petersen, $201.40; Edward S. McGrath, $122; Harry M. Hitchcock, $162.60; Albert B. Crosswait, $194; James R. Russell, $125.40; Norman L. Goldman, $239; Frederick H. Fletcher, $201.40, and Meyer N. Goldman, $396.

Attorneys Dean Hill Stanley and Joseph R. McCuen, representing the bandsmen, estimated slightly more than $4,000 would have to come out of the District's coffers to meet the judgments.

Austria Keeps Treaties, Von Schuschnigg Boasts

Vienna, Oct. 8 (AP).—Chancellor Kurt von Schuschnigg told 40,000 members of the Fatherland Front tonight, in an indirect reference to President Roosevelt's appeal for observance of treaties, that Austria scrupulously observes her international agreements.

The chancellor was bareheaded and deeply earnest as he faced the mass meeting before the city hall and declared Austria's biggest job was to keep out of quarrels which disturb Europe.

"Happily, there are no Austrian volunteers in Spain," he observed.

Wounded British Envoy Given Honors in Manila

Manila, P. I., Oct. 8 (AP).—Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, British Ambassador to China, wounded by machine-gun bullets from a Japanese plane several weeks ago, arrived here from Shanghai today.

The ambassador appeared weak and ill as he limped ashore. He was greeted by a 19-gun salute and then reviewed the United States troops forming an honor guard.

Indiana Governor Pleads for Truce In Dairy Walkout

Indianapolis, Oct. 8 (AP).—Gov. M. Clifford Townsend urged tonight that a truce be called in strikes at two dairies, and an ice cream company here, and that all Indianapolis dairies resume deliveries.

Entering the disagreement for the first time, the Governor announced, "it is my intention to bring about a settlement without causing an increase in the price of milk to consumers, or a decrease in the price of milk to farmers."

He suggested representatives of the dairy operators, the striking union and the State milk control board, form a committee to audit books of the dairies to determine whether higher wages could be paid. He urged that a truce be in effect until the committee could make a report.

Truck drivers were on strike for new wage and working contracts.

Indianapolis, Oct. 8 (AP).—Joseph Williams, business agent of the Teamsters and Chauffeurs' Union, announced tonight strikes had been called at all Indianapolis furniture stores, and at the Beech Grove Bus Co. for union recognition and better working conditions.

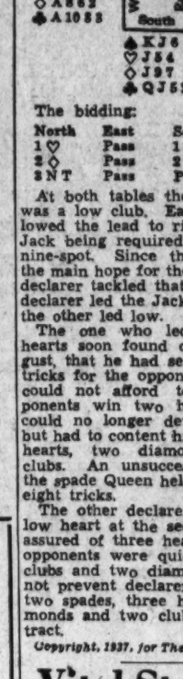
Contract

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Today's hand was played in a large duplicate tournament and produced remarkably different results at various tables. Many of the players who held the North hand held the rebid of two hearts. This was invariably passed by the South players, and the hand was played for less than a game. Some of the North players made the rebid of two diamonds (as in the case of the table reported below). Even then, however, Smith called to show the strength of his intermediates, and the hand was played for less than game.

Only two tables got to three no-trump, both of them by the bidding reported below. Only one of the two dclearers, however, made his contract.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 N T	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

At both tables the opening lead was a low club. Each declarer allowed the lead to ride around, the Jack being required to take East's nine-spot. Since the hearts were the main hope for the contract, each declarer tackled that suit. But one declarer led the Jack of hearts, and the other led low.

The one who led the Jack of hearts soon found out, to his disgust, that he had set up two heart tricks for the opponents. Since he could not afford to let the opponents win two heart tricks he could no longer develop that suit but had to content himself with two hearts, two diamonds and two clubs. An unsuccessful guess for the spade Queen held this player to eight tricks.

The other declarer, having led a low heart at the second trick, was assured of three heart tricks. The opponents were quick to take two clubs and two diamonds but could not prevent declarer from winning two spades, three hearts, two diamonds and two clubs, for his contract.

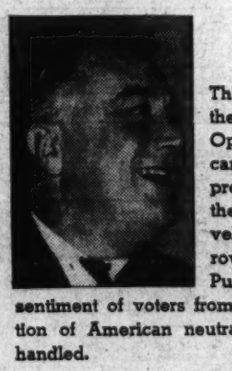
Sports . . . Peace Poll

Sunday Post Features

SPORTS COVERAGE

Tomorrow is a banner day for sports fans. The World Series, local and national football, racing and the women's golf tournament hold the spotlight. The Post's enlarged sports section will bring you the story of all sports events. Wirephoto gives you the picture story. Complete football results, a page of sports pictures, race results and charts are but a few of the many big features.



POLL ON NEUTRALITY

The current nation-wide poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion is particularly significant and timely in view of the present war scare throughout the world and President Roosevelt's Chicago speech. Tomorrow the American Institute of Public Opinion will express the sentiment of voters from coast to coast on the question of American neutrality and how it should be handled.

Special Features

This special coverage of sports and opinion is augmented by an imposing list of special features, including the newest additions to The Sunday Post's all-star comic strip family. They are "Terry and the Pirates," "Smitty," and "Prince Valiant," three exciting and humorous comics. New Sunday Post features include the famous pirate stories by Charles Driscoll; a brand new dog column by George Berner, who writes with emphasis on dog news of importance to Washington.

Bob Burns Says—

I had an uncle who made quite a study of women's dispositions and he decided before he got mraried he would find one with a good even temper. He was beginnin' to get pretty discouraged when he went to a party one night and was sitting opposite from a woman who got some soup spilled on her gown.

When he saw this woman smile sweetly, he says to himself, "That's the woman for me!" So he started courtin' her. No matter what test he put her to, she was always so smiling and sweet about it that he finally married her. Then he got a shock.

No matter what little thing he said, she'd fly into a violent temper. Finally he says to her, "Why is it I never saw any signs of that temper while I was courtin' you?" and she says, "I use'ta wait until you left and then I'd go upstairs and bite chunks out of the washstand."

Six Admirals Will Take New Posts Shortly

Lackey to Relieve Fairfield for Squadron 40, in European Waters.

Six admirals will take over new commands in the next two months, Secretary Swanson announced yesterday.

Rear Admiral Henry E. Lackey, director of Shore Establishments, will relieve Rear Admiral Arthur P. Fairfield as commander of Temporary Squadron 40, now in European waters, about December 1. Admiral Fairfield will come to Washington for duty at the Navy Department.

The new commander of the Submarine Force will be Rear Admiral Charles S. Freeman, commandant of the Norfolk Navy Yard, who will assume his new duties about October 25. He will succeed Rear Admiral Joseph R. Defrees, who will be director of Shore Establishments, Navy Department.

Rear Admiral Manley H. Simons, commander of Battleship Division 1, Battle Force, will relieve Admiral Charles S. Freeman at Norfolk Navy Yard about November 12. Admiral Simons will be succeeded by Rear Admiral Adolphus E. Watson, now serving as a member of the General Board of the Navy.

Commanded Cruiser Memphis.

Former Inspector of Ordnance in charge of the Naval Proving Ground, Indian Head, Md., Admiral Lackey was in command of the cruiser Memphis, which brought Col. Charles A. Lindbergh home following his flight to Paris in 1927.

After commanding the Naval Training Station, Norfolk, Va., Admiral Lackey was commander of the battleship California flagship of the Battle Force.

Immediately before his appointment as director of Shore Establishments in 1935, Admiral Lackey was on duty as commander, Cruiser Division Four, Scouting Force.

Admiral Fairfield, who was assistant chief of the Bureau of Navigation from 1933 until 1935, has been in command of Temporary Squadron 40 since September, 1936.

Fairfield Served Here.

In 1917, Admiral Fairfield was on duty in the Bureau of Navigation in connection with new destroyers, and in January of the following year was ordered to fit out and command the U. S. S. Gregory. He again returned to the bureau in 1925 and then was appointed commander of division 27, Scouting Fleet.

After serving as commander, Destroyer Squadron Nine, he was ordered to the office of Naval Operations where he was in charge of the Ship Movement Division. Admiral Fairfield was assistant chief of the Bureau of Navigation from 1933 until 1935 when he was ordered to command of Cruiser Division Seven, Scouting Force.

Admiral Freeman, former superintendent of the Naval Observatory here, commanded the midshipmen's cruise on the U. S. S. Arkansas in 1930. He was in the office of Naval Operations from 1919 until 1922. During the World War he commanded the destroyer Trippe and the Fourth Division, Torpedo Flotilla, Atlantic Fleet. Co-ordinator, ninth area, San Francisco, in 1932, he was commander of the Special Service Squadron from 1933 until 1935.

Admiral DeFrees has had three tours of duty at the Navy Yard here. After his first assignment to the gun factory, he was ordered to duty in the Bureau of Ordnance.

After service at the Navy Yard in 1921, Admiral DeFrees served as commander, Submarine Division, Asiatic Fleet, with additional duty as Commander, Submarine Base, Cavite, Philippine Islands. He returned as commandant of the Navy Yard and superintendent of the Naval Gun Factory in 1933. Three years later, Admiral DeFrees assumed his present duty as commander of the submarine force.

Admiral Simons completed the course at the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., in 1924, and then served for two years on its staff. In 1934, he was appointed chief of Staff, Cruisers, Scouting Force.

Admiral Watson was executive officer of the battleship Florida, which operated with the British Grand Fleet during the World War. In 1921, he was on duty here in the Bureau of Navigation, Navy Department.

After serving as chief of Staff, Battleships, Battle Force, Admiral Watson, in 1932, served as professor of Naval Science and Tactics for the Naval Reserve Officers Training Unit at Harvard University. The following year, he assumed command of Destroyers, Scouting Force. In 1935, he was appointed president of the Naval Examining Board, and became a member of the general board of the Navy on March 9, 1936.

Officials to Assist In Hopkins Rites

Funeral rites for Mrs. Harry L. Hopkins, wife of the Works Progress administrator, will be attended this morning by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and other officials. The Rev. Dr. Russel J. Clinchy will conduct the services in the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, 1410 Columbia road.

Pallbearers will be James Roosevelt, the President's eldest son; Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau; Aubrey Williams, deputy W. P. A. administrator; Col. E. A. Watson, military aide to the President; Marvin McIntyre and Stephen Early of the President's secretarial staff; Frank C. Walker, former director of the National Emergency Council, and Burnett Maybank, Mayor of Charleston, S. C.

Mrs. Hopkins, the former Barbara Duncan, was married in 1931. Besides her husband, she is survived by a 5-year-old daughter, Diane; a brother, Commander Donald Duncan, U. S. N., and her sister, Mrs. Richard Stevenson, of Hawthorne, N. J.

Mrs. Hopkins will be buried in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Man Jailed for Threat To Cotton FieldWorkers

Blytheville, Ark., Oct. 8 (AP).—George Gowdy, colored, was fined $500 in municipal court today and sentenced to 12 months in jail upon conviction of intimidating laborers in northeast Arkansas cotton fields.

Negro witnesses testifying for the State said Gowdy warned them not to pick cotton for less than $1 per 100 pounds, declaring they would be beaten if they did. Pickers in this area are being paid 75 cents a hundred.

Ship Escapes Damage After Changing Course; Rain Holds Up Armies.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Oct. 8.—Reports from Tarragona, on Spain's Eastern coast, quoted shore observers today as saying an insurgent airplane flew over a British merchant ship 8 miles offshore and dropped several bombs.

The observers said the ship was not damaged, but was forced to change its course several times.

Insurgent planes also raided Reus, 10 miles northwest of Tarragona, and Alicante, on the southeastern Spanish coast. Bombs fell near the Alicante Breakwater, injuring 15 persons.

Madrid newspapers expressed the hope that France immediately will throw open her frontier for shipments of munitions to government Spain if Italy does not reply favorably to the Anglo-French note asking a three-power conference on withdrawal of foreign volunteers from the Spanish insurgent forces.

The government announced two new food decrees cutting the daily Madrid ration from 200 to 100 grams (from 7 to 3½ ounces) and fixing the price of horsemeat at approximately 11 cents per pound.

U. S. Issues Stricter Rules For Licensing of Air Pilots

Commerce Bureau Increases Number of Hours Required, Stiffens Tests for Fliers of Passenger Planes and Instructors.

New regulations, effective November 1, were issued yesterday by the Bureau of Air Commerce, requiring that airplane pilots receive "certificates of competence" rather than licenses.

Pointing out that new rules have recently been adopted by the bureau to improve safety conditions in air commerce, bureau officials said extensive revision of flight instruction requirements will be forthcoming.

The number of flying hours required of all except private pilots has been increased by the regulations.

To obtain solo rating after November 1, a pilot must have had five hours alone in the air; for private flying rating, 35 hours; for limited commercial rating, 60 hours; for commercial rating, 200 hours, and for airline pilot rating, 200 hours.

Two special ratings have been created—instrument and instructor. The instrument ratings (blind flying) is available to private, limited commercial and commercial pilots, the latter to commercial and private pilots.

Other important changes in the regulations included:

A student flier must have eight hours of dual instruction, given by a certified instructor who must swear to his qualifications as stated on the student's certificate, before the latter can make a solo flight.

A private pilot may give flying lessons (not for hire) after he has successfully passed the same instructor rating tests and examinations as a commercial pilot—to be taken only after he has 200 hours solo to his credit.

If a pilot fails to pass a flight test for the pilot rating, he must accumulate 15 hours additional flying time before he may reappear for examination.

All pilots and aircraft flying on civil airways or in interstate or foreign air commerce must be certificate holders.

Private pilots may not engage in flight activities which are commercial in any respect.

One Convict Killed, Another Wounded In Fight to Escape

By the Associated Press.

LaGrange, Ky., Oct. 8.—One of five convicts who overpowered and disarmed a guard at the State prison farm near here late today was slain half an hour later in a gun battle with guards near the prison. Another prisoner was wounded. The other three were recaptured.

The dead man was identified by Warden James Hammond as Jim Russell, 27, of Harlan County, who was serving a five-year sentence for storehouse breaking.

Hillard Spicer, 19, of Breathitt County, was wounded in the arm, Hammond said. He was serving a 21-year sentence for robbery.

Hammond said the five convicts, who had been working under guard on a road-building project on the prison farm site, overpowered their guard, O. H. Montgomery of Oldham County, seized his rifle and fled to a nearby State highway.

There, Hammond said, they halted a passing automobile and abducted the occupants, Joe McCormick, of LaGrange, and W. C. Wathen, of Louisville. The prisoners drove toward Louisville and had gone less than a mile when they found the road blocked by a convict crew making repairs at a railroad crossing.

Teachers' Leader Asks Boycott Against Japan

Chicago, Oct. 8 (AP).—Dr. George Axtelle, vice president of the American Federation of Teachers, urged today a national boycott of Japanese products after the federation's executive council adopted a resolution calling for a boycott "in the interests of preserving peace in the Orient."

The federation's resolution said Japan's undeclared war in China created "a war situation which will directly involve the United States in another war."
